Opinion Says No War
Lloyd's Will Not Insure
$1,100,000,000 for War
A Glass Schoolhouse

New York city presents a peace time "loyal" war—strike-breakers described by the union as "thugs with heavy clubs," imported from outside cities.

The real estate owners' organization says the strike also has been imported from outside cities, and is now directed by a non-resident.

New Yorkers who thought they wanted to live high up in the sunshine may find themselves back in the bungalow state, on the ground floor; no elevators necessary.

While Europe generally believes the war indefinitely postponed, Lloyds refuses at any price to insure against, but Lloyds sometimes makes mistakes. Lord Northcliffe offered ten thousand pounds to anybody that would fly across the English Channel. Lloyds insured Northcliffe against such a possibility. Then the Frenchman, Bleriot, collected 10,000 pounds from Lloyds.

Lloyd George, who certainly saw the inside of the big war, attacks France, saying she is "in no position to point a finger of scorn at Germany on the ground of treaty-breaking. For twelve years or more France has refused to carry out her undertaking to disarm. Even after the Locarno treaty her armaments increased yearly."

Defense supply bills provide fifty-nine million dollars to pay for five hundred and sixty-five army planes, and twenty-six million dollars for three hundred and thirty-three navy planes, this coming year.

More than $100,000 apiece would seem a big price for a small war fleet. Could not something be done with mass production to produce a huge high-speed air fleet as automobiles are produced? A $700 automobile, if made in small quantities, would cost from three to five thousand dollars.

The United States expects to spend on defense this year, according to the Associated Press, eleven hundred million dollars, more than the nation used to spend in two years for all its expenses. National life, like everything else, is becoming expensive. But it is worth whatever it costs.

Hibbing, Minn., has a new glass schoolhouse, with vacuum glass walls regulating the temperature, beautifully colored interiors, movable desks for upper grades, brightly painted furniture for children in kindergarten, and an "electric eye" that turns on more light automatically when the light becomes too dim for the children's eyes, whatever the time of day.

That wise spending of public money, a sign of improving civilization, would surprise the old British governor who said before 1776 there had never been a public school in his territory and he "hoped that there would not be one for 100 years to come."

In many European cities the conspicuous building is still the old feudal castle or the jail. Here, thank Heaven, it is the high school.

Thanks to airplanes, North and South America will gradually become better acquainted. American private enterprise has connected the two continents efficiently. In February, just past, the number of international air travellers clearing at Miami alone numbered 4631, breaking the record.

Regular air service across the Atlantic between England and this country is announced by Eugene L. Vidal, director of air commerce. British Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airways will each send two planes across the Atlantic every week —via Newfoundland and Ireland in summer, the Azores and Bermuda in winter. Only mail and express packages, no passengers, will be carried for some time during experiments.

Meanwhile, the new and "biggest-on-earth" Zeppelin is expected to begin regular passenger-carrying flight between Berlin and New York, as has been done for a long time between Berlin and Brazil.

Gradually, flying becomes a reality.

In the business of collecting, crime seems more efficient than local government.

In one gambling raid the city of Miami collected $624 in fines. Five bandits with masks and guns, raiding another gambling house at the same time, did better. They collected $18,000, all the winnings of the previous night. The second kind of collecting might discourage gambling.

London Hints She'll Be Queen

The name of Princess Catherine of Greece, sister of the recently returned King George II, was heard most often today as speculation continued over the possibility of Edward VIII taking a Queen. Court attaches admitted this. Catherine is the first cousin of Princess Marina who married the Duke of Kent.

G.O.P. ORDERS 'PAY-AS-GO' ECONOMY

Republican members of the legislative ways and means committee today slashed $13,000,000 from Governor Curley's record-breaking $79,000,000 budget, which taxpayers' associations so hotly denounced at a public hearing this month.

The state legislature also scrapped in its entirety the governor's $9,000,000 borrowing plan for new buildings.

They issued a statement declaring against any state borrowing this year and for a resulting pay-as-you-go policy.

In trimming down the budget to approximately $66,000,000, they made deductions in 400 different items.

CONSTITUTE MAJORITY

The statement follows:

"Republican members of the joint committee on ways and means have today presented to the whole committee for consideration a revision of the Governor's budget.

"This revision calls for a reduction of about $13,000,000. It provides for maintaining the present salary levels for state employes, but for no increases this year, and likewise provides for strict economy in all 'housekeeping items.'

CUTS FAVORED

Some of the cuts favored by the committee included expense of the Governor's office, compensation of officers and employes, a reduction of $15,760; contingent fund, reduction of $35,000; maintenance of Governor's car, reduction of $1500.

Attorney General's office, a reduction of $17,000 from the $126,000 asked for.

State income tax division, a reduction of $14,000 off the $169,000 requested for personal services.

Department of agriculture, a cut of about $7000 from the $32,000 asked for personal service.

NAZI REFUSES TO RECALL ARMIES

Berlin, March 12 (INS)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler today issued a "take it or leave it" ultimatum to the Locarno powers as statesmen representing those countries gathered in London to debate his re-occupation of the Rhineland.

The German government, in a statement issued just a few hours before the Locarno diplomats met in London, delivered an eleventh-hour warning that if Germany is not met half way Chancellor Hitler will withdraw the peaceful proposals he made Saturday in conjunction with re-militarization of the Rhineland.

The statement officially rejected France's claim that the Rhineland reoccupation constitutes a menace to France.

CHOOSES ISOLATION

The statement expresses Germany's desire to take part in direct negotiations, and also pledges the Reich to maintain the Rhineland status quo during any such negotiations.

The Reich said the statement, will not increase the present forces occupying the Rhineland if other powers show an "analagous" attitude.

Finally, the statement threatened Chancellor Hitler would withdraw

France Plans Ultimatum; Hitler in New War Threat

Lloyd George Says:

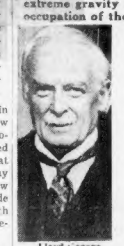
'GERMANY'S MOVE NOT ACT OF WAR'

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE

Prime Minister of Great Britain during the World War

(World copyright, including South America, 1936 by Universal Service and American Newspapers, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

London, March 12—There can be no doubt as to the extreme gravity of the situation created by the German occupation of the demilitarized zone. I have already in preceding articles given my view as to the increasing inflammability of European conditions.



Lloyd George

Suspicions are deepening—fears intensifying—armaments piling up. Last Saturday Hitler organized a torchlight procession through this powder magazine. The sparks have already lit fires that are flaming along towards huge explosive heaps with alarming rapidity. Can these fires be put out in time? That is the anxious question on every lip.

British opinion took the Nazi coup calmly on the whole. Eden's statement in the House of Commons fairly represented the British view. Hitler had no business to do it. His methods were highly reprehensible, but he did not mean mischief and the substantial offers he makes to enter a 25-year non-aggression pact and rejoin the League are worthy of examination. That shows how the average Briton regards the episode.

No one in this country could work himself into a state of fury over the invasion of German towns by a division—or two at the outside—of German troops.

To call the occupation of the famous old German city of Cologne by a couple of battalions of German soldiers an act of "wanton aggression" was something British common sense couldn't assimilate. The press of all parties were of one mind on the subject. Let us protest, but negotiate!

Behind all this refusal to wax indignant at the German breach of treaty obligations was recognition of the fact that France had for 15 years refused to honor her own solemn pledge

PARIS SPURNS PEACE UNTIL NAZIS GO

Copyright, 1936, the Associated Press

London, March 12—A high source disclosed today that France has drawn up a virtual ultimatum to other Locarno Treaty signatories hinting that single-handed action again Germany might be necessary if no agreement is reached in diplomatic discussions here.

This disclosure followed within two hours a German government announcement, issued in Berlin, that Reichsfuehrer Hitler would withdraw his recently offered peace proposals if the other powers tried to force Germany to cede any of her sovereign rights.

MAY BOLT PARLEY

Such sovereign rights, it was understood, included Germany's thesis that she could move troops in Germany wherever she chose.

It was stated that the French delegation in the present conference of treaty signatories was ready to go back to Paris if no agreement was reached here.

The French were understood to be insisting absolutely on the removal of German troops from the Rhineland.

It was stated that they might attempt to close the German frontier in confidence that their military and natural strength was so great that Hitler eventually would be forced to yield on the Rhineland issue.

British statesmen, conferring with the French, Belgian and Italians, sought to hold a middle course to preserve the peace.

There was no immediate official

WOMAN ON TRIAL IN 'HOAX BABY' CASE

By WIN BROOKS

Boston Evening American Staff Writer

Dorchester, N. B., March 12—In the courtroom where yesterday her younger son was doomed to hang, Mrs. May Bannister today sobbed a denial that she sent her children into the night to kidnap Betty Lake.

The jury was completed at noon.

Notified late yesterday that her son, Arthur Bannister, 19, had been found guilty of the murder of Philip Lake, Mrs. Bannister spent a sleepless night, came into court sobbing convulsively on the arm of Police Matron G. B. Papineau.

Her deep sobs, evenly spaced like a clock tick, sounded throughout the room as the three counts in the indictment charging her with abduction were read, and she pleaded, "Not guilty."

BREAKS DOWN

Then, during arguments by her counsel, H. Murray Lambert and Crown Prosecutor Peter J. Hughes, K. C., she bowed her head, put a handkerchief to her eyes and broke down completely.

The entire list of 61 petit jurors

FLOOD MENACE SPREADS IN N. E.

Flood conditions, estimated to be the worst in years, prevail throughout most of New England today after 24 hours of rain and high temperatures.

The first death of the flood was reported from Manchester, N. H., where a workman, trying to release flashboards from a dam, plunged to death into the Piscataquog river.

Massachusetts, particularly in the central and western sections, is among the hardest hit of the states. Railroad lines are washed out, slides have smothered highways, dams are weakening and telephone lines are down.

FRANCE WELDS ARMY OF 40 MILLION TROOPS FOR WAR

8000 PLANES, VAST NAVIES HELD READY

Copyright, 1936, the Associated Press

Paris, March 12—France, dropping official hints that she might prefer a "preventive war" against Nazi Germany now to a "carnage" later, hastened today to cement a chain of military alliances which would place a potential army of 40,000,000 men at her disposal.

A possible allied army of that magnitude was disclosed in new, if unofficial, figures to be based on an alliance of France, Soviet Russia, the Little Entente and Poland, and to embrace:

1—For 48-hour mobilization: 8,000,000 men.

2—Additional trained reserves: 21,000,000 men.

3—Eight thousand airplanes.

RINGS REICH IN

The new military calculations were made as Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin, at London, brandished the threat of French withdrawal from the League of Nations to compel Great Britain to join in fighting Adolf Hitler for his armed march to the Rhine.

At home, the French senate took up the question of final parliamentary ratification of the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact.

It was this far-reaching treaty which the German Fuehrer blamed for nullifying the Treaty of Locarno and causing remilitarization of the Rhineland. It is the last step in forging an "iron ring around the Reich," extending from the English channel to Asia and the Arctic ocean.

Events of the past week having fostered a tremendous sentiment in France in favor of the pact, the Senate was expected to lose no time in approving it by an overwhelming vote.

ARMY OF MILLIONS

The first category of the "paper army," scoops which could be mobilized within 48 hours, was reckoned approximately thus:

France, 1,000,000 men; Russia, 3,000,000; Poland, 1,000,000; Rumania, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, 800,000 or more each.

In the second category were placed these trained reserves:

France, 7,000,000; Russia, 17,900,000; Poland, 2,000,000; Rumania, 1,000,000; Yugoslavia, 1,700,000; Czechoslovakia, 1,500,000.

As for airplanes, France was listed as able to muster 2400; Russia, 3000; Yugoslavia, 800; Poland, 700; Czechoslovakia, 600 and Rumania, 500.

Flandin, attending the renewed Locarno conversations in London, was represented by French officials to be "almost convinced" that a "preventive war would be preferable to "carnage two years from now." At that time, it was felt, "treaty breakers" will be powerful.

EXODUS FROM LEAGUE

"We know war is coming in two years anyway," again said one informed personage. "We might as well have it now, while we are prepared. The only way Hitler's troops will leave the Rhineland is for the Locarno signatories to drive them out, but a stitch in time saves nine."

Another authoritative source, backing up the threat of withdrawal from Geneva, declared:

"Other powers whose policies are based on collective security and who are determined to support the French and Belgian stand before the League of Nations have informed us that, if the treaties seemed worthless, they will not hesitate to quit the League."

Diplomats believed the reference was to the Soviet Union and the Little Entente.

Ratification of the Franco-Soviet pact, already approved by the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate Foreign Affairs committee, will be the signal for the general staffs of the two nations to go to work coordinating their military systems against a possible German attack.

$52,800,000 RED LOAN

A proposed 800,000,000 franc (about $52,800,000) loan to the Soviet, to be used for the repair of Russia's western frontier railroads and highways, is still pending in Parliament.

The estimate of 3,000,000 men constantly under arms in Russia has been made by Leon Archimbaud, reporter of the Chamber of Deputies army committee. Archimbaud said, however, the Red army was handicapped by "insufficiently educated officers and a "woeful lack" of competent reserve commanders.

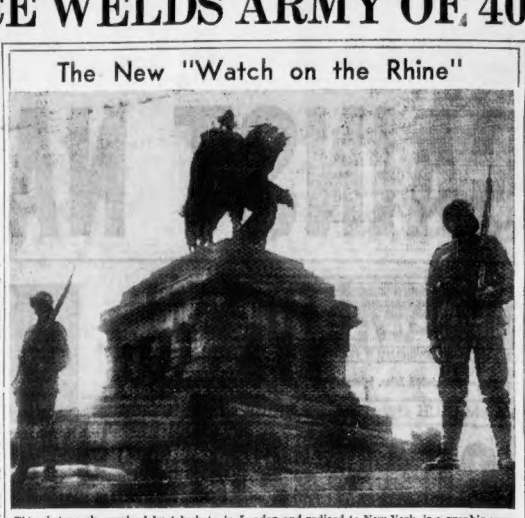
Archimbaud reported there were 46 Soviet infantry divisions, 19 cavalry divisions, and numerous army corps in specialized branches constantly in the field. Russia, he declared, has 3000 fighting planes and 2000 tanks.

The French-inspired "wall" around Germany is the fruit of half a hundred anti-war pacts, signed and sealed in Europe's chancelleries.

The New "Watch on the Rhine"



This photograph, received by telephoto in London and radioed to New York, is a graphic symbol of the latest "Wacht Am Rhine" by Germany. Two German troopers, helmeted and carrying bayonetted rifles, are silhouetted against the sky as they do sentry duty before the famous "Wacht Am Rhine" monument which looms over the historic river in Coblenz.

'Take It Or Leave It' Hitler's New War Threat

hint as to what the British plan contained, but it was believed that it stopped short of laying down an ultimatum to Germany to remove its troops from the long demilitarized zone.

A French spokesman declared:

"We shall not discuss the 'peace proposals' made by a power which has broken treaties until the broken provisions of those treaties are restored."

The British were understood to be insisting that the situation be handled firmly but carefully.

The British argument, it was said, did not change the French position.

Said the French spokesman "We are not interested in Hitler's proposals as long as his troops stay on the Rhine."

This British policy developed from three successive meetings of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's cabinet, in the consensus of diplomatic circles, while statesmen of the Locarno powers assembled for his peace proposals, including the offer to return to the League of Nations, if the German case is not discussed to Germany's liking.

"Germany will choose honorable isolation rather than continue to live as a nation discriminated against by others," said the government announcement.

CITES 30-MILLION ARMY

France's fears regarding the Rhineland are groundless, the statement contended, because the occupation army is much smaller than an estimated 30,000,000 land, air and sea forces backing France through foreign alliances and guaranty pacts against any German aggression.

The statement listed as French allies Belgium, Poland and Czechoslovakia and emphasized the huge French fortifications along the German border. It stressed the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact, which Hitler gave as the reason for his Rhineland action, and mentioned Great Britain and Italy as guarantors of the Locarno pact.

Listing the forces of these nations together, the German government estimated a total peace-time strength of 3,000,000 men lined up against Germany, and a war-time strength of 30,000,000 men.

Countering France's claim the Rhineland must be de-militarized again despite these security assurances, the statement said:

"And now France claims 19 German battalions in the Rhineland constitute a menace to French security, guaranteed by half the world."

The German government then drew the conclusion the small German contingent in the Rhineland proves Germany does not intend to put France under pressure, or force France into negotiations under unacceptable circumstances. Furthermore, it declared, the German proposal to institute a great peace offer "inherently unstable and crushed any discrimination against any country."

Hitler's proposals included an offer to conclude a 25-year pact of non-aggression with France and Belgium. It contained the Franco-Soviet pact, nearing final ratification in Paris, was erected against Germany.

The statement asserted Germany might have declared the Locarno treaty voided by the Franco-Soviet treaty, and might then have withdrawn completely from the European field of co-operation without remilitarizing the Rhineland.

WON'T ENLARGE ARMY

Instead of this, Germany offered a constructive plan for definite pacification of the continent, the statement said.

"The German government," said the statement, "desires nothing better than either direct negotiations with France and other European powers over realization of these peace proposals, and therefore has kept re-militarization on a symbolical status.

"There will be no change in the present status of militarization provided an analogous attitude is exhibited by France and Belgium during these negotiations."

The statement concluded with this threat to withdraw from the peace efforts:

"If this attitude should not be agreed to by the other governments, the German government, it goes without saying, will withdraw its proposals and would rather choose honorable isolation than continue to live as a nation discriminated against by others."

France Drafts Ultimatum; Plans Alone to Rout Nazi discussions on which peace or war depends.

BROKEN TREATY IS BLOCK

France's foreign minister, Pierre-Etienne Flandin, demanded a retreat of the Nazi troops from the left bank of the Rhine before the powers consider the offers of new treaties which Hitler extended simultaneously with the violation of the Locarno treaty.

He declared upon his arrival for the conferences:

"I have every confidence in the ultimate issue of the conversations which have been begun."

Diplomats said Britain was turning to acceptance of France's conditions as a preliminary to opening new negotiations, based on Hitler's proposals for an entire new security program.

While willing to negotiate with the Reich, diplomatic sources said, the other Locarno nations—Britain, France, Belgium and Italy—could not do so as long as they were faced with the actual unilateral treaty violation committed by Germany's occupation last Saturday of the Rhineland.

They expressed belief if Britain could persuade Hitler to reduce his Rhineland army to that "symbolical" force referred to in his Reichstag speech Saturday, there would be a much more hopeful outlook for easing the situation.

This swing of British opinion, informed sources said, gave France a virtual united Locarno front against Germany.

French officials already claimed the full backing of Belgium and the tentative support of Italy, the other two powers represented in the conference, called to discuss how to deal with Germany's treaty violations.

Outside the conference room, France maintained the backing of Soviet Russia, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Poland, Greece and Turkey in its drive to make Germany back down.

The renewed deliberations, switched suddenly to London after the first meeting of representatives of the Locarno pact signatories at Paris Tuesday failed to result in an agreement, opened with a British cabinet meeting at No. 10 Downing street.

Eden and Lord Halifax represented Great Britain in today's meeting of the powers. It was understood that Prime Minister Baldwin was keeping in the background and possibly would enter the negotiations later.

Maxim Litvinoff, foreign commissar of Russia, and Nicholas Titulescu, foreign minister of Rumania, will arrive here tonight.

Gen. Reilly's Analysis:

GERMANY STRONG FOR NEXT WAR

The military significance of the de-militarized Rhineland zone, just occupied by German troops, is graphically described in the second and final article in this series by Brigadier General Henry J. Reilly, noted American military expert.

By BRIGADIER GENERAL HENRY J. REILLY

(Copyright, 1936, by American Newspapers, Inc., and Universal Service)

Washington, March 12—As long as the Rhine valley was unoccupied by German troops, Germany had no natural line of defence in case, when moving against Russia, France should advance her armies into Germany. The broad, rapid Rhine with bridgeheads on its southern bank at Cologne, Coblentz and Mauntz gives Germany a strong defensive position.

With the increased defensive powers of modern weapons, particularly when reinforced by aviation, such a position would be an extremely difficult one to force.

The fear that the Germans would stand on the Rhine and successfully defend it had a great deal to do with the Armistice terms offered her in November, 1918, when General Pershing was in favor of going on into Germany.

The knowledge of what a strong obstacle the Rhine makes was the primary reason Marshal Foch wanted to have the Treaty of Versailles make the boundary between France and Germany.

Gen. Henry J. Reilly

The Germans remember that in the spring of 1919 when they did not want to sign the Treaty of Versailles some of the allies were ready to advance on Berlin.

They know that the allied armies were in a position to do so because they occupied the south bank of the Rhine with bridgeheads on its north bank at Cologne, Coblentz and Mayence.

They want to make any such advance as difficult as possible from now on.

Just as in Japan today the army and navy, while agreeing on the necessity of an expansionist movement for Japan, disagrees as to whether it should be West against Russia or south against Britain and the United States in the western Pacific, so in the German military world there has been a disagreement.

Whom to Fight?

One school has always argued that Germany's needs were best met by going west against France and England.

The other has always insisted that it would be better to go east against Russia.

When it was decided to fight France in 1870, the greatest fear of Von Moltke, German chief of staff, was that Russia would strike in his rear.

From the time of the preceding Franco-Russian alliance, that of 1896, the discussion went on as to whether it was more advantageous to remain on the defensive on the French or western front and attack Russia, or the reverse.

In the war of 1914-1918, the attack on the French front first was tried. It failed. Ultimately the whole power of America was brought to the help of this front, an eventuality never even remotely considered prior to 1914.

Prior to the war of 1914-1918 the Russians because of their possession of Russian-Poland were in an excellent position to attack Germany, as their frontier was a big salient shoved well into Germany towards Berlin.

As the Russians had heavily fortified it, it was a difficult salient to cut off by striking at its base as the Germans and Austro-Hungarians discovered in 1915.

Today an independent Poland, and the Baltic States of Lituania, Latvia and Esthonia and Finland reverse the situation. This because their frontiers with Russia are a long way east of where Russia's frontier was in 1914 and thus many miles closer to Moscow.

Either as allies of Germany, or as neutrals, these states would make Russia's situation highly unfavorable by comparison with what it was in 1914.

Poland while ready to back France if Germany is the aggressor, is very likely to be Germany's ally if Russia is the enemy instead of France.

The war of 1914-1918 showed the Germans to be past masters in the use of railways to transport troops, guns and supplies. Their advance into Russia in the north and center roughly coincided with the line which today is Russia's western frontier.

In the south they crossed the Ukraine to the shores of the Black Sea and almost to the Don river.

Today the new German army, which is well on its way towards complete organization and equipment, thanks to motorization and mechanization, has power of movement far surpassing that of the army of 1914-1915.

Some of the military world have seen the details of the new German army. They are convinced that its leadership, armament and efficiency is considerably surpasses the new Russian army.

The German air force may have fewer planes than the Russian. On the other hand it is undoubtedly the unit more efficient. Also the Germans possess the means in their excellent industry to maintain it during a war. The Russians do not possess the means to maintain theirs.

When the Japanese navy brought off the attack on Shanghai in 1931, Britain was aroused in a way that taking over Manchukuo had not stirred her. This because the Yangtze valley, of which Shanghai is the seaport, contains vast British interests.

Since then the Japanese who support the naval policy of expansion to the south have given cause for Britain to worry about her vast interests in southern China.

As the average Britisher wants this threat to his prosperity stopped, and as he wants no war on the Rhine, it is only natural if he sympathizes with the Japanese army's desire to expand at the expense of Russia. Thus British interests in Europe and Asia coincide.

HITLER HAILED BY ROARING CROWDS IN RHINELAND

Karlsruhe, Germany, March 12 (AP) — Reichsfuehrer Hitler came to this city of the Rhineland today to a delirious ovation.

The roaring cheers of the crowds below drowned out the sound of his airplane's motors as the big ship in which he traveled from Munich circled to an easy landing.

The whole town was decorated with Ewastika flags. Thousands of people lined the streets shouting "heil!"

From Karlsruhe he will proceed to Munich for another speech Saturday.

Der Fuehrer called the general Reichstag elections last Saturday, when he stunned the world with his proclamation of Rhineland reoccupation, to give the German people a chance to agnin show they are behind him.

U. S.-Nicaragua Sign Trade Pact

Washington, March 12 (AP)—The United States today concluded its 11th reciprocal trade agreement, signing with Nicaragua an unconditional most-favored-nation pact embracing tariff concessions by both countries.

In return for maintaining on the American free list a number of Nicaraguan products already admitted duty-free to this country, the United States obtained duty reductions on nine agricultural and industrial products. The Nicaraguan government pledged not to increase tariffs on 15 others. The agreement will become effective 30 days after the exchange of ratification at Managua.

U. S. Legion Chief Sees New War

Allentown, Pa., March 12 (AP)—Ray Murphy, national commander of the American Legion, pointed to "evidence that preparations are under way for another war" and declared that "the Legion believes America can and should keep out of that struggle."

"The American Legion has seen enough of war," Murphy told an Allentown audience last night.

"We believe peace can be maintained honorably if definite steps are taken now to remove the primary cause of war. I wish we might extend this same hope to other nations, but we have learned by costly experience that many of them remain unwilling to sheath the sword."

Women Protest Arms Increase

Washington, March 12 (AP)—Opposition to any increase of armaments and armed forces was expressed to President Roosevelt today by delegates of women representing the Committee for the People's Mandate to Government.

Mary Emma Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke College, the chairman of the committee, presented an appeal to the President. Miss Woolley stated that Mr. Roosevelt's talk to the delegation was "entirely off the record."

$30,000 for Vote Probe

Washington, March 12 (AP)—The Senate today voted $30,000 for an investigation of senatorial and presidential campaign expenditures.

FLOOD MENACE SPREADS IN N. E.

LANDSLIDES ADD TO HAVOC

Two days of steady rain and thawing temperatures today unleased floods on New England that compare with those of 1927, when 120 persons perished in this section.

One death today was reported at Manchester, N. H., where Henry Roy, 31, of Goffstown, plunged from the Gregg's Falls dam into the swirling waters of the Piscataquog river.

Only a sharp drop in temperatures and a cessation of rain promised relief. But the weather bureau, forecasting sub-freezing recordings, saw also a continuation of the downpour ahead.

In four of the New England states, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Vermont, conditions were extremely perilous to life and property. Southern Maine is rapidly feeling the brunt of the flood.

Throughout Massachusetts and New Hampshire landslides, provoked by huge masses of thawing ice and melting snow have buried main highways for miles.

Railroad tracks are washed out in a score of sections. Dams are weakening and workmen are using dynamite to break up ice-packs on the rivers while they build sandbank levees on their banks.

School sessions have been suspended, not only in central and western Massachusetts, but in a score of towns in and around Greater Boston.

Most main highways north and west of this state are virtually impassable because of the ice jams or floods of water unloosed upon them.

At New High

Greater Boston has been hit already. The Charles river, risen to an all-time high of 42.86 feet at the Riverside station of the Metropolitan police, flooded the Moody street section of Waltham.

Workmen were dispatched to plant sandbags on the river banks there. Tons of water inundated the old Boston Manufacturing Company plant. Flash boards have been removed from the dam.

At Fitchburg the Nashua river had reached flood stage and a general alarm was sent out among residents to be ready to get out at their homes.

At Arlington Heights the reservoir overflowed onto the Boston & Maine tracks between the railroad station and Forest street place, a distance of more than half a mile. Railroad service was almost at a standstill.

The Theodore Schwamb Manufacturing Company, like several other plants in western Massachusetts and throughout Connecticut, was forced to close down when its cellar was flooded and boilers buried in water.

In Southbridge, it was estimated that more than $100,000 damage had been caused to streets. Damage multiplied tenfold throughout other cities and towns in this state.

The Merrimack, Connecticut and Blackstone rivers are rising steadily and relentlessly. Ice jams menace bridges on the Merrimack as the battering flow of the swollen torrent piles them higher.

School sessions have been suspended, thousands of cellars flooded, and hundreds in middle and western Massachusetts are making ready to evacuate homes in lowland districts.

Probably a dozen bridges are already under water in this state. Some are expected to crack under the roaring torrents hurling tons of ice at the structures.

Landslides at Becket, Chester and Bonny Rigg, in the Berkshires, have made the Albany Post road impassable. More landslides and ice jams in the southwestern corner of Massachusetts have cut off traffic from Connecticut.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Record slides of ice, snow and dirt have buried most of the 15-mile highway between Jackson and Gorham. A 12-foot avalanche, sliding down Crawford Notch, cut off Daniel Webster Highway. The Merrimack river has risen two feet and a half at Nashua and has flooded more than 200 cellars. Winter sports enthusiasts, in huts on Mt. Washington, are isolated, but believed safe. CCC workers and highway department employes are working under emergency orders.

CONNECTICUT

Conditions estimated to be the worst in 25 years in some sections. Railroads blocked and telephone wires down in a dozen communities. Families evacuating valley homes in New Milford and Southbury. Hartford prepared for worst by nightfall. Bridge at Cornwall swept away, five families escaping flood. Rowboats replace automobiles at Norwalk and other towns on Long Island Sound. Two men reported stranded in "Squatters' Colony," near Waterbury. Housatonic river up six feet in 12 hours.

VERMONT

Boston & Maine main tracks washed out at Pompanoosuc, one section 12 feet under water, another under 20 feet. Line closed between White River Junction and Wells river, trains being detoured to Concord, N. H. Ice in Stevens branch of Winooski river breaking up and presents menace. Power companies at St. Johnsbury estimate rivers rising at rate of three inches an hour, but rate increasing. Families in lowlands and valleys ready to evacuate.

MAINE

Androscoggin river rising all along its tributaries, but with heavy rain predicted for tonight to replace light steady drizzle now in force, danger is increasing. Ice jams are expected to present real menace. Meteorologist at Portland predicts "moderate flood conditions" in southern part of state. Northern Maine watersheds still locked in snow and ice.

RHODE ISLAND

This state has so far escaped the worst of the flood, although cellars in lowlands are under water and roads are in bad condition. The rise of the Blackstone river in the western part of the state is causing alarm among those living in its valley.

As close to Boston as Billerica and Concord, the rise of the Shawsheen and Concord rivers is causing alarm. The Shawsheen has overflowed and more than four feet of water covers farms and yards in the lower sections.

Up in the Merrimack river belt, textile manufacturers have moved their stored goods from their basements and are preparing for real flood conditions by nightfall unless there is a drastic change in conditions.

In Central Massachusetts, main roads are impassable. The dam at Texas Village, near Oxford, has spilled tons of water into Route 20, a main highway, and workmen were working frantically to save the dam.

At Charlton they were using dynamite to break up the huge ice-packs that battered the dam and had already caused cracks in the concrete structure.

At Northbridge, there is a foot of water on the highway between there and Providence, and at Sturbridge the fair grounds are under four feet of water. A bridge, newly-constructed, is weakening at Fiskdale. The road to Brookfield is wholly under water.

In the western part of the state, schools are closed. The Westfield river is on a flood rampage and at West Springfield, the Connecticut has overflowed to within 2 feet of the main highway.

Flood conditions were the worst in years at Southbridge, with McKinstry Brook and the Quinebaug River overflowing their banks, hen houses, dog kennels and other outbuildings swept away and considerable of the fowl and animals drowned.

Between New Boston, in the southern Berkshires, and Winsted, Ct., highways are so bad that they cannot be cleared for several days, even if the flood water drains away.

The telephone lines between New Boston and Sandisfield are down. Two bridges are out of sight, except for their overhead girders. The bridge between Gaylordville and Still River is impassable and dangerous.

In Malden, the combined forces of flood rains and departing frost hoisted a 15,000-gallon fuel oil tank and its 100-ton concrete ballast over out of the ground at the filling station of Eli Cossack at Eastern and Hillside avenues.

Firemen were asked for aid in holding the tank down after its upward movement had necessitated cutting the connecting pipes to prevent the pump house from being lifted and overturned. The firemen pumped water into the tank in an effort to add weight and keep it down.

Fellsway West, in Medford, was turned into a raging river by water pouring off the concrete slope of Fern road and other thoroughfares. It was necessary to detour motor traffic off the Fellsway.

The Lawrence estate district of Medford, with between 200 and 300 homes, was flooded and cellars nearly filled with water, while in the vicinity of the Medford high school field, Fulton street, 150 cellars were flooded.

Workers Risk Ducking to Free Ice Jam at Waltham

Heavy rains and thawing temperatures caused the Charles river to overflow its banks at Waltham today pouring tons of water into cellars of firms near Moody street. Workers are shown here erecting an emergency dam of sandbags to stem flood peril.

A stout heart and good muscles are required for this perilous task of freeing ice at the upper edge of the dam. Rope to the right leads to the Moody street bridge while one to the left goes to the bank for added protection. Even so, only a few inches separates boat of the workers from a plunge over the dam. Flood did heavy damage in Waltham today

Whom Shall It Be?

KAISER'S KIN LISTED

London, March 12—Maybe Princess Catherine of Greece will be the new Queen of England.

This was the word which swept through Mayfair today as to who might become the bride of King Edward VIII.

Princess Catherine is the sister of King George of Greece, and she is a cousin of Princess Marina, who married the Duke of Kent recently. She was a bridesmaid at that wedding.

Dowager Queen Mary intimated the bachelor King might marry soon, and her remarks on the subject built up still further the report in the House of Commons that the King would marry shortly.

Another name mentioned in Mayfair was that of Princess Cecelie, 19, daughter of former Crown Prince Wilhelm of Germany and the most beautiful eligible.

Edward, when Prince of Wales, and the younger Cecelie often rode togeterh when she was here at school. She is an excellent horsewoman. Like Edward, she, too, is interested in welfare work.

She is slender and tall, a feminine edition of her brother, Prince Frederick, 25, the former Crown Prince's youngest son, who is known as the "handsomest prince of Europe."

Frederick, a godson of the late King George V, was the first royal German personage to be received by a British king after the World War, when he had luncheon with King George at Cowes in 1934 and received a gift of cuff links from the King.

Prince Frederick is mentioned as potential German ruler if the Nazi ever decide on a restoration.

He represented the Hohenzollern family at the funeral of King George and also that of Lord Jellicoe, his friend, and commander of the British grand fleet at the battle of Jutland.

King Edward obviously contemplates marriage, as indicated when he asked that the "contingency of his marriage" be considered when the House of Parliament approve a civil list totaling some $2,000,000 a year.

When William Thorne, Laborite member of Parliament, inquired: "May I ask whether His Majesty has given any guaranty that he is going to get married?" there was no government response.

And while diplomatic circles declare that Edward will never marry for "political convenience," they speculate on the favorable aspects of a romantic alliance.

4 Officers Save Woman Gas Victim

Four policemen applied artificial respiration in a police cruiser car today to save the life of Mrs. Marion K. Curry, 56, of Chandler street, South End, overcome by illuminating gas.

Her husband, Joseph, who had left the house at 8 o'clock, returned a short time later to find the door locked.

Patrolmen Daniel Duggan and Richard Callahan, passing in the car, broke down the door and found Mrs. Curry sitting before the gas stove, her head resting on the single burner, which was turned on.

With Patrolmen Hersey D. Slack and Sylvester Murphy of the Warren avenue station, they applied artificial respiration while they raced for City Hospital.

Hospital attendants said Mrs. Curry would probably recover.

Paraguay Nation Now Totalitarian

Buenos Aires, March 12 (AP)—The militarist government of Paraguay, which succeeded the civilian regime of President Eusibio Ayala after last month's revolution, has established a totalitarian state for its 1,000,000 people.

The government of Col. Rafael Franco issued a decree in making the administration the supreme arbiter of all social, political and labor activities.

O.K.'S 'RED' TEACHERS

Presence of one or two Communists among Massachusetts teachers would indicate merely "a healthful condition" Dr. Stanley King, president of Amherst College, declared in an address before the Boston alumni at the University Club.

Dr. King made the statement as he attacked members of the legislative committee on education for treatment accorded college presidents at recent earings on the proposed repeal of the teachers' oath law. He said:

"Their attitude may have an effect on the standing of Massachusetts education in other states. What must they think when these representatives of ours ask men like Presi - Conant o' Harvard if he is a Communist.

"There never has been a Communist in our educational system and if there were one or two, what harm would it do? It would merely indicate a healthful condition."

LLOYD GEORGE SAYS 'NAZIS MOVE NOT ACT OF WAR'

to reduce her gigantic armaments if Germany set the example.

Germany complied with every undertaking she gave in this respect and invited France to redeem her promise.

Britain realizes that the victorious powers are not in a position to pull out the righteous indignation stop of a pipe organ to full length. So the government and the press have played it softly.

Not so with France. The French press and French politicians are rabid. They do not mind unilateral breach of a treaty so long as the offending unit is France. What makes them hysterical is that Germany should presume to follow their lead and make breaches of Versailles bilateral. Hence, the undubitable seriousness of the present position.

Will France make war? In the present mood she wouldn't hesitate to do so, unless the council of the League holds her back. Her military advisers, I understand, are not only prepared to march, but would go so far as to recommend it.

In spite of the exaggerated figures disseminated from time to time by French sources for propagandist purposes as to the menacing strength of Germany and the comparative weakness of the French, heads of the French army know they are overwhelmingly stronger in numbers and equipment than any probable assailant.

Fear Next 3 Years

Their fears are that two or three years hence German preparations will be so far advanced that it will then be too late to act. The French staff, therefore, urges immediate action.

Bismarck took the same view of the French efforts to recreate their broken army after the shattering defeat of 1870. He was on the point of taking strong action to forbid the rearming of France. Queen Victoria intervened to stop this proceeding.

Will the League play the same part today and thus avert war in Europe? The meetings in the next few days will supply the answer and will therefore be momentous.

If France receive the slightest encouragement or authority from the League, she might reoccupy one of the Rhine bridgeheads. If Germany resists, that means war whereof none can foresee the end.

The German army, in equipment and the number of divisions is utterly inadequate to carry on a campaign which would involve the invasion of French territory. Of that the Germans are fully aware and they wouldn't be foolish enough to attempt it. On the other hand, I think the French are underestimating the resistance which the Germans could put up to an invader on their own soil.

In artillery they are not comparable to the French. But machine guns are the weapon of a defender and proved to be the deadliest machine for slaughter used in the late war.

Engines of Death

The Germans have had enough time to supply themselves with scores of thousands of these engines of death. Every kilometer of the Fatherland captured by invaders would cost them a heavy toll of sacrifice. A machine gunner who is prepared to immolate himself in holding his post to the last is as formidable as a battalion.

The German youth today have that self-sacrificing mood. They would fight with the recklessness and despair and with the patriotic fanaticism which is comparable to that with which the ragged volunteers of the French Revolution fought and ultimately defeated the picked armies of Europe.

By all the rules of war the Prussian and Austrian march toward Paris at the end of the 18th century was an easy walk throughout. It was beaten back by an untrained ill-equipped mob of men who were unafraid to die.

The French must read their own history if they want to realize what an incalculable force they would encounter when they come up against a people who rejoice in death for "Patrie." It is all written in the history of both France and Germany.

If France told the story with its Sanseculotte army, Germany had already written the same tale in the days of Frederick when she fought against overwhelming odds almost to the last man and untimately triumphed. General staffs are apt to overlook the human factor.

I am still hopeful that the League council will restrain French impatience. There are sinister factors working for war. The first is the bitter hostility between Russia and the Nazi regime. Judging by the communication in the press from the Soviet ambassador in London, Russia is doing its best to stir up French pugnacity. That will probably encourage and stimulate the bellicose elements in Paris.

There is a deadly feud between Communist Russia and Nazi Germany. The Soviet leaders know that if they can defeat Germany and destroy the prestige of the present leaders, Communism will inherit the ruins. That would be the inevitable result.

Reds in Accord

It is rather significant that the Communist party of France which is nominally pacifist just passed a flamboyant resolution demanding steps should be taken for effectively protesting against Hitler's action in the Rhineland.

French Communism is in complete accord with Russian Communism. They know their business. The question is whether there is enough moderate opinion in France to realize the ultimate perils and uncertainties of war.

It is a hopeful sign that even some of the most bellicose writers in the French press are throwing out tentative suggestions which might avert an actual conflict.

At first the French ministers were inclined to demand complete withdrawal of German troops from the Rhineland as a condition precedent to any negotiations.

That Hitler could not possibly agree to as it would involve humiliation of the soldiers who under his orders have marched with banners waving and trumpets blaring into the cities of the Rhineland.

Other and more feasible alternatives have now been put forward such as limitation of the number of German troops in the Rhineland and a veto on fortification.

Although it was later reported the French government denied contemplating such alternatives, the solution might be found along those lines. It is too early, therefore, to assume that hostilities are inevitable.

U. S. "Hands Off" Europe's Crisis

Washington, March 12 (INS)—The United States government will flatly refuse to join in any economic or financial sanction the League of Nations may invoke against Germany at the bequest of France.

The state department today adopted a strict "hands-off" policy in the latest European war crisis which has resulted from Germany's military occupation of the Rhineland.

Although the United States participated in practically all important discussions that led up to the signing of the Versailles treaty in 1919 and reserved certain rights in connection with that treaty, this government now wants no part in the dangerous situation which has developed as a result of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's virtual scrapping of that pact.

Boy Injured, Dying

Brockton, March 12 — Critically injured when run over by an oil truck, Paul Vogel, 4, is still fighting for life at Goddard Hospital today after receiving two blood transfusions. Investigation is being made of the accident by Randolph police.

Britain Urged To Set Rhine As Frontier

London, March 12 (INS) — Recalling Stanley Baldwin's famous declaration that "Britain's frontier is no longer the shaik cliffs of Dover . . . but the Rhine," the Times, which has close official connections, today called upon the government to make that a "diplomatic fact" as well as a geographical one.

Baldwin's statement was "historically and strategically a truism," said the Times, "a truism not less obvious than formerly in a day of aerial armaments and collective security.

"The balance of power—'divide and be secure' is no longer the basic British doctrine.

"To register a historical fact as a diplomatic fact may yet be a contribution to peace."

Germany, the editorial said, "must volunteer to the world some immediate practical proof that her actions are not menacing, and that the good faith of her offer (of new treaties) is indisputable."

SPANISH GUARD SAVES DEPUTY

Madrid, March 12 (AP)—A police guard was shot and killed today during an attempt to kill Professor Luis Jiminez, a leading Socialist deputy.

The attempted assassination was part of the bitter warfare between rightists and leftists spreading through Spain.

Policeman Gisbert, bodyguard for Jiminez, was hit by five bullets when he interposed as a shield. He died in a hospital. Jiminez was unhurt.

The attempt to kill him was made by four or five men.

A Fascist student, Emilio Bellotell, died today of wounds he received Tuesday. He was the second student to die in the present disorders.

Burke Heads Franklin Police

Franklin, March 12 (AP)—State Trooper Walter P. Burke, a senior patrolman at the Foxboro barracks, has been appointed chief of police of Franklin by the Board of Selectmen.

NAZIS ISOLATED BY 10 ALLIED NATIONS

London, March 12 (AP) — Diplomatic negotiations for settlement of the Locarno pact crisis lined up France and nine allies today against Germany, absolutely isolated.

France, calling for punishment or withdrawal of Nazi troops from the Rhineland before considering the Reich's offers for new treaties, claimed the support of:

Belgium, Soviet Russia, Yugoslavia, Czechoslvakia, Rumania, Poland, Greece, Turkey and Italy if sanctions were lifted from the warring Fascist nation.

SWINGS TO FRANCE

Britain took a comparatively central course, seeking to gain consideration for Germany's treaty proposals, but reported swinging to France's side for a withdrawal first of at least some of the Nazi troops who occupied the Rhineland.

Germany, a center of the web of some 120 pacts which have been signed and ratified in Europe since 1919, had the full support of no other nation—more isolated even than during the World War.

German sources conceded there probably would be nothing but the Reich army to give weight to Germany's claims, while France announced she and her allies could mobilize more than 8,000,000 soldiers in 48 hours.

SIGNED PACT IN '34

The German government signed a non-aggression pact with Poland in 1934, but the Franco-Polish pact for military assistance, signed February 19, 1921, and prolonged in successive years, informed sources said, outweighed the German-Polish agreement.

Italy, center of recent German diplomatic activities, was believed in German quarters to be ready to sell its support to the highest bidder, undoubtedly taking the stronger side.

Hungarian Nazi Slashed in Duels

Budapest, March 12 (AP)—Andras Mecser, Hungarian Nazi leader known here as "Hitler's personal representative," finished a poor second in successive duels with two journalists in the officers' Casino today.

Mecser had challenged them after he caused the ejection of newspapermen from a meeting he was addressing.

Austria in Drive on Hitlerites

Vienna, March 12 (US)—Austro-German relations again were strained today as the result of the arrest of Hans Heinrich Amann, press attache of the German legation here.

The arrest prompted a new nationwide drive against Nazis in Austria. Four hundred Austrian Hitlerites were taken into custody throughout the country.

JAPAN, SOVIET IN SPY TILT

Tokyo, March 12 (AP)—Friction between the Soviet embassy and the Tokyo government, and a fresh outbreak of Japan spy suspicions arose today as the two-fold aftermath of the February 26 military assassinations.

Russian Ambassador Yourenett protested to the Japanese foreign office against arrest of three Japanese interpreters in the Soviet embassy.

Police disclosed that since February 26, 11 Japanese have been arrested "on suspicion of violating the military secrets protection law," including the three Soviet employes, one of them a woman.

The Japanese press made a sensation of the incident under such headings as "Spy Unearthed," asserting the persons had Communist leanings, and gathered damaging information concerning Tokyo conditions during the rebellion, which they supplied to the Soviet or tried to sell to foreign diplomats.

Soviet residents in Tokyo, diplomats and others, it was learned, were being watched closely.

Radek Sees Soviet Hitler Target

Moscow, March 12 (AP)—Karl Radek, authoritative writer, said today in an article in the government newspaper Isvestia that the danger of an attack by Germany on the Soviet Union is growing.

He asserted the main purpose of Hitler's move into the demilitarized Rhineland was to keep France subdued while the Nazis lined up forces for a war in the East.

KIRK DRAWS UP STATE TROOPER PENSION BILL

State troopers will be pensioned under a retirement system similar to those now in effect in certain European countries if a plan being worked out by Commissioner of Public Safety Paul G. Kirk meets legislative approval, it was learned today.

Details of the plan were taking shape long before the framing of the civil service bill under which troopers sought "security" was killed by the general court, but the report will not be ready for many months.

Commissioner Kirk revealed today that he had corresponded with police officials of other states and several European countries with a view to establishing a retirement system for his troopers.

STUDIES FOREIGN PLAN

"In the Netherlands and in Belgium there is a police system similar to ours; that is, not thoroughly military as in Germany or at one time in Austria," he said.

"There the men are enlisted and excellent discipline is maintained.

"After a prescribed number of years a pension system based on a percentage rating takes effect.

"The retiring officer is given 1-40th or 1-50th of the salary he obtained during his last year of service and that is multiplied by the number of years he has served.

HOW PLAN WORKS

"If an officer, for example, earned $2000 in his last of 10 years of service, 1-50th of the amount would figure $40 which, multiplied by his 10 years of service, would give him an annual pension of $400.

"Other systems provide that after an officer has passed a real active age he is given preference in other forms of public service where less physical activity is needed.

"The problem is not a minor one by any means and must be approached with considerable care. I intend to keep at it and it is a labor of pleasure for me. I am strongly in favor of having our officers protected by statutory law.

"It appears that some system like those adopted by European countries may be worked out in Massachusetts."

Lynn Site Studied as Airport

The possibility of land near the General Edwards bridge in Lynn being used as a landing field for the giant German dirigible LZ 129, which will open transatlantic passenger service this summer, was announced by Mayor J. Fred Manning of Lynn.

John R. Backus, assistant secretary to Governor Curley, requested information concerning the area and condition of the city-owned property on the east side of the recently completed bridge, in a letter to the Lynn mayor.

The property consists of 137 acres of land on the water front, which has within the last year been completely filled in and graded.

The dirigible, according to tentative plans, will run between Germany and Lakehurst, N. J.

The Lynn official believes that the Lynn site may be used for a temporary or emergency landing field until such time as the schedule is arranged to include a New England stop.

Safes in Church Balk Crackers

Safe crackers failed in an attempt to break open two safes in the Second Church of Christ Scientist, Elm Hill avenue, Roxbury, today after gaining an entrance by forcing a side door on Howland street.

The break was discovered by Patrolman Thomas J. Sullivan of the Dudley Street station when he found the side door open.

Tools found in the janitor's locker were used in knocking off combinations on the safes and were later turned over to the fingerprint department.

Democratic Club Planning Dance

Crash Hurts 3 In West Roxbury

Three men were injured, one critically, when the auto in which [illegible] skidded, crashed [illegible] overturned at Belgrade avenue and Arborway, West Roxbury, early today.

"Why should this happen to you? You are a man, West Roxbury always give us a hard time," mother replied.

[illegible] H. Dunbar [illegible] Mass., South Boston, was found to have a fractured skull, concussion of the brain and internal injuries. His name was placed on the danger list.

His companions, less seriously hurt, were held for treatment. They gave their names as Joseph Mulligan, 24, Rossiter street, and Frank S. Foley, 27, Wainwright street, both of Dorchester.

Couple Celebrate 25th Anniversary

More than 100 friends and relatives will gather tonight to help Mr. and Mrs. Fiore Lombardi celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary.

The celebration will be held at 83 College avenue, Medford, home of the couple.

Arrangements were made by the three sons, Albert, a student; Joseph, a salesman, and Leo, connected with the advertising department of the Boston Evening American, and their daughter, Mena.

Building Code Sought for N. E.

Recommendation for a uniform building code for all New England, the outgrowth of six years of study by architects, engineers, contractors and manufacturers, is to be made next month at the 23d annual convention of the New England Building Officials' conference at Hotel Statler.

DICKINSON URGES VOTERS TO OUST RAW DEALERS

Communism or Socialism faces the United States unless the Roosevelt administration is defeated, Senator Lester J. Dickinson of Iowa told the Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts in scoring the Raw Deal as the greatest foe of recovery.

"Throw the bunglers out," Senator Dickinson cried as he blamed the Raw Deal for stifling business, building a political machine at public expense, increasing unemployment and the public debt and threatening constitutional principles.

The entire Roosevelt program was characterized by the Iowan as an "upside-down" plan in which "neither the man in the White House or Jim Farley know where they are leading us."

He also was particularly bitter toward the manner in which the $4,800,000,000 "blank check" which Congress gave the President for relief was spent.

"President Roosevelt said politics was out and that there would be no sectional or political distinctions at all," Senator Dickinson said. "I am content to let the record of what happened speak for itself.

"The kind of projects Mr. Roosevelt had up his sleeve, which he kept so carefully concealed while the relief bill was pending, are now known only too well.

"We know something, too, of the methods employed in spending that money. We know that those in distress have been shamelessly exploited. There is no more disgraceful page in the history of American humanitarian effort than this political abuse of charity and the defenseless poor.

"Each day brings report of fresh scandals."

He then pointed out that the this was the logical outcome of the greed of political machines in proving to the needy that in them is the key to bread and butter.

"It is, after all," he continued, "the extending of the policy of coercion which underlies the entire administration program. All opposition is to be intimidated or crushed.

"So far as relief is concerned the need for reform is immediate and pressing."

this was the logical outcomem of quickest reform would be the defeat of the Raw Deal in the November election.

Unless such action was taken, he predicted, there would be complete chaos and collapse with the American people reduced to a "common molten mass in a Communistic State."

Roosevelt's Son Listed In Brookline

Protests against his name on the Roosevelt delegate slate to the Democratic National Convention from the ninth district did not deter James Roosevelt, son of the President, from filing a certificate of residence in Brookline Town Hall today.

When he was asked for a reason for filing the certificate, young Roosevelt replied he merely wanted to make sure he was on the Brookline voting list.

According to the certificate, Roosevelt gave as his voting address 308 Walnut street, Brookline, which is the home of his father-in-law, Dr. Harvey Cushing.

Congressman Richard M. Russell of Cambridge named young Roosevelt and Mrs. Edward Gallagher of Brighton, wife of the city councillor, as Roosevelt delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

The Village Social and Athletic Club added its protest in a statement issued by Daniel J. O'Neil, secretary-treasurer of the club.

When the President's oldest son was questioned today by a reporter, he was as reticent as his father to direct queries.

He said he had spent the night at the home of his father-in-law and had gone to the Town Hall today merely to be sure my name was on the voting list."

He also said that he had no idea whether he would be a delegate, remarking "the matter is entirely in the hands of others."

Dr. W. H. Wilmer, Eye Expert, Dies

Baltimore, March 12 (AP)—Associates here were informed today of the death of Dr. William W. Wilmer, internationally known eye specialist. He died in his home in Washington of a heart ailment.

Dr. Wilmer founded the Eye Institute of Johns Hopkins Hospital that bears his name but, some time ago, retired as head of the institute. Since then he had lived in Washington.

His fame was forid-wide and frequently he was called upon to examine and treat distinguished diplomats and even rulers of other countries. Among the latter was the King of Siam, who consulted with the specialits here.

'Let Them Finish Bruno'—Hoffman

Trenton, N. J., March 12 (INS)—Although Governor Harold G. Hoffman is strongly opposed to ending the life of Bruno Hauptmann, he will not halt the scheduled execution the week of March 30, he said today.

The New Jersey executive declared he had no legal power to grant any further stays.

"Let them finish Hauptmann off," the governor said. "It won't stop the investigation, but I wouldn't want to be in their shoes if something radically different than was charged at the trial arises in future years.

"Certainly, it should be worth giving Hauptmann his life in exchange for the true story. I have tried my best to get at the truth. I can do nothing else.

The governor added that he was awaiting Dr. John F. Condon, now en route from Central America. He said he was anxious to have the ransom intermediary clear up "numerous obvious discrepancies."

$13,000,000 Crop Loans Available

Washington, March 12 (AP)—President Roosevelt assured the Senate Agricultural Committee today he would make $13,000,000 of emergency funds available for crop production loans effective March 20 and more money up to $30,000,000 as needed.

In a letter read by Chairman Smith (D-S C), the President said it was "not practicable" to make the entire $30,000,000 immediately available.

N. Y. Lift Strike Mediator Sought

Washington, March 12 (INS)—F. A. Silcox, chief of the forestry division of the Department of Agriculture, today was asked by opposing factions in the New York elevator strike to arbitrate the controversy.

At Silcox's office, it was said he had received the invitation, and was considering it. His decision will be announced later.

Mayor Fiorello La Guardia, here for a conference with President Roosevelt, will fly back to New York immediately after his visit to the White House.

New York, March 12 (AP)—Mounting hopes for an immediate settlement of the crippling city-wide building strike were blasted today by union leaders who presented an ultimatum to employers after a eight-long parley which adjourned with the end of the walkout apparently in sight.

FORD TO PUSH BANK CHARGES

Indictments against a dozen bankers in connection with the collapse of the Federal National Bank and the Boston-Continental National Bank will be "prosecuted to the limit," U. S. Attorney Francis J. W. Ford has announced.

The case slated for trial will be tried in May, though Ford said he had not reached a decision as to which case will be first.

Awaiting trial for alleged mismanagement of the banks are Henry C. Castle, Brockton business man, against whom are eight indictments charging conspiracy to misapply $27,000; Joseph Stone of Brockton, vice-president of the Boston-Continental, who is charged with misapplying $15,300; and Joseph Balter, director, charged with misapplying $58,200.

Arthur J. Smith, auditor of the Boston-Continental National Bank, and Fred D. Hendrick, Brockton building man, are also under indictment.

Those awaiting trial for alleged misapplication of Federal National Bank funds are Theodore B. Logan, a director; Lloyd B. Fanderson, treasurer of the Inman Trust of Cambridge, a subsidiary of the Federal National Bank; Cornelius J. Corcoran, president of the Lawrence Trust Company, and Arthur T. Brady, director of the Inman Trust Company.

Assistant U. S. Attorney John A. Canavan has been assigned to try the cases.

FLUSH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste, poisonous matter may develop, causing serious trouble. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist.

If You Would Learn Milady's Temperament—Look at Her Feet!

According to Andre Perugia, noted Parisian shoe designer, a woman reveals her personality in the way she walks. So "watch your step," ladies, if you want to make a good impression.

Girls from the current RKO-Boston stage show posed their feet, as shown above, to illustrate how the temperament of the individual is disclosed in the way she walks or stands.

"A woman who is envious and down-at-the-mouth generally has a bunion.

"A woman who has 'sex appeal' walks along evenly, firmly and with poise."

WRITER SAYS KANSAS EXECUTIVE SHOULD BE NAMED

From the Erie (Pa.) Dispatch-Herald

Editor Dispatch-Herald—Sir: The public attention seems to be centering these hectic days on Governor Landon among all the Republican presidential aspirants. Right now Senator Borah is garnering most of the publicity, along with Colonel Knox, but it can scarcely be denied that Landon's budget-balancing feats have made the keenest impression.

And this pre-election straw shows pretty accurately the way the wind is blowing, as does the somewhat frantic and not altogether defensible sudden efforts of the Roosevelt administration to "set the government's book-keeping in order"—like, for instance, the decision to cancel congressional authorization for certain federal lending agencies.

It will be admitted, of course, that it was more or less an economic necessity for the Roosevelt administration to check the deflation of 1932 and 1933 by emergency spending. But the general public has never looked upon the depression—and never will—as anything else but a emergency. Hence, the present policies of inflationary borrowing and spending begin to look altogether too permanent as government policies.

That's why people grow uneasy. That's why they look to the recent Landon address at Topeka as that of a man who knows how to put his feet on the ground of sound economic policy for governmental purposes—and keep them there. The governor dealt wisely with the soundness of paying as you go, and the folly of piling up huge debts.

Back in 1933, in his famed but ill-kept economy message to Congress, President Roosevelt said:

"Too often in recent history, liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy."

The New Deal of which all Democrats boasted so proudly a couple of years ago and at which Jeffersonian Democrats now gaze with fear and trembling, is foundering upon those very rocks—and Governor Landon looks to many folks like the potential skipper who can haul the ship of state off the breakers and get her back on an even keel again.

George Bancroft's Wife Wins Divorce

The degree was granted by Judge William E. Orr after a short hearing behind closed doors here. The couple wed in New York City April 7, 1913, but have been separated five years.

A Woman in Soviet Russia

Starving Workers Beg For Food on Time Off

Mrs. Sophie Hornyak was born in Hungary and came to America as a child. After her marriage she and her husband settled in New Brunswick, N. J., where they became active Communists.

In 1931, Mr. and Mrs. Hornyak and their son and daughter went to Russia, which they expected to find a Communist paradise.

There the starvation and misery among the workers so overcame her that she returned to America and is now working in Bridgeport, Ct.

Mrs. Hornyak has described her experiences in Russia in a series of articles, of which the following is the third:

By SOPHIE HORNYAK

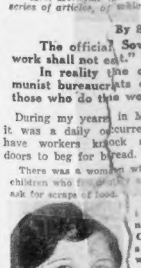
In reality the opposite is the truth. The Communist bureaucrats do not work, but eat well. And those who do the work, starve.

During my years in Moscow, it was a daily occurrence to have workers knock at our doors to beg for bread.

There was a woman with two children who frequently came to ask for scraps of food.



Sophie Hornyak

"In the name of Christ," she would pray, "Give us something to eat." She did not look like a common beggar. Once I engaged her in a conversation.

"Do you still believe in God?" I asked, feigning surprise, "I thought that in the new Russia there was no more religion."

"Yes," replied the woman, "the Communists destroyed the church, but they cannot destroy the belief in God. Before, we at least had enough bread. Now we have neither church nor bread. We still believe that there will be a change, that some day we will get both bread and freedom."

"Aren't you afraid of going to prison for talking that way?" I asked.

"Why should I be afraid of you? You are a foreigner, you always give us a little bread," the mother replied.

"Are there many Russians who think the way you do?"

"Everybody, the whole people, but they have no arms," the woman observed. "Yes there will come a day of reckoning!"

"You talk like a Czarist," I remarked with some astonishment.

"No, I am not a Czarist. I fought for the revolution under Lenin. My first husband perished fighting the white generals. But you can see for yourself what we have gained."

Works Yet Hungers

"Why don't you go to work in the factory?" I suggested.

"I do work in the factory and my husband works too," the poor woman declared, "I am on the third shift. I start at eleven o'clock at night. I earn 60 rubles a month and my husband makes 150 rubles. We have four children.

"After we pay the taxes and the rent and the school fees, we have nothing left. My little girl is almost 12, and she has nothing to wear. She can't even go to school."

"Just a minute, I'll see if I can find something for you," I said.

"Oh, how good you are!" the woman exclaimed and seized my hand, trying to kiss it.

"No!" I protested and tore my hand away. "I am a working woman myself. You fought for the revolution here and I fought for Communism in America. We are both in the same class, except that I will get my freedom soon and you will remain a slave. When I return to America I will tell the workers there how you live here."

I gathered up a few things which belonged to my daughter and gave them to the poor woman. But there are millions like her. In the Elktrozavod where I was employed I was the envy of the Russian workingwomen.

Often they would ask me why the Soviet government lied to them about America when they themselves could see that Americans were well-dressed and well-fed.

"Why don't you ask Comrade Stalin that question?" I once turned upon my factory friends.

Great Deception

"We know that it's a great deception," they sighed. "But tell us, why did you come here? Why don't you go back to America?"

I explained that I had been a Communist in the United States and that I remained so long in Russia in the hope that things would improve.

"But now I am convinced," I continued, "that there is no hope."

"And where do you come from?" I inquired.

"From the Ukraine," the woman replied. "And you should see the famine down there!"

She gave gruesome details. Another peasant woman who had just found a job in our factory picked up the conversation.

"I had a little farm in the Northern Caucasus," she told me. "I had to leave it because it was impossible to pay the government taxes.

"There was a personal tax of 40 rubles, a general tax of 35 rubles, a compulsory state loan subscription of 100 rubles, fire insurance levy of 40 rubles, and a passport fee of 6 rubles.

"I had to deliver 55 poods (1260 pounds) of potatoes from each hectare (less than two and one-half acres), 312 quarts of milk from each cow, nearly 60 pounds of meat from each cow slaughtered, and a third of a pound of wool from each sheep shorn.

"They took all our grain away. We paid as much as 6 rubles a pound for bread. Lots of people perished. So I came to Moscow."

Desert Farms

There were millions like this peasant woman who deserted the land which their families had cultivated for generations. Incredibly hard as life was for the industrial workers, it still seemed like a refuge to the people from the country. In the cities one could beg, and the chance for survival was greater.

Occasionally our factory workers did enjoy a special feast.

This happened when foreign delegates and tourists visited the Elektrozavod—one of the Soviet model plants. I recall particularly the coming of an American delegation in 1933.

"Sonia," the woman in my shop said to me, "let's make for the restaurant. Today we will have a real meal."

The ordinary price of a meal was from two to two and a half rubles. I seldom went there, because of the cost and the food was unsatable. How amazed I was when I reached the restaurant this time.

The tables were covered with cloths! There were napkins and flowers. The main dish served was meat. The American delegation had wrought a magic change.

Some of the delegates asked us how much we paid for the meal. The workingwomen replied two rubles and 40 kopecks. The interterperter translated it as 40 kopecks.

One of the delegates asked a working-girl how much she earned. The answer was 75 rubles a month. The interpreter translated it as 275 rubles.

I thought I would burst from rage, but I supressed my indignation. There was not a woman in our shop who earned more than 150 rubles.

But the meal was a real banquet for the workers. What did it matter if a shocking deception had been enacted by the Communist bureaucrats, so long as meat was served?

Smarts With Shame

I smarted with shame. The thought of these Americans returning to the United States and describing how glorious was the life of workers in Russia made me furious.

And now that I am back in America, and I see these friends of labor, and professors hold forth about the freedom and happiness of the Soviet workers, I find that I have no means of convincing them that they were victims of a terrible deception.

Can a plain workingman be believed by the American intellectuals? Stalin's propaganda machine seems stronger than all the testimony of all the common workers who went to Russia to give their all to Communism and who have come back shattered by their experiences.

The American "friends" of labor may be deceived, but the Soviet masses know that their enemy is the Soviet government, and that history will still give them a chance to settle accounts with the tyranny of Stalin.

SPINAL MALADY KILLS ANOTHER

Patrick Maloney, 53, an inmate of the hospital since last summer, succumbed to the dread disease, the 11th death in state and city institutions this year.

Strict quarantines are being observed at the Long Island Hospital, Deer Island, Bridgewater State Farm and a wing of the Westboro Insane Hospital.

JUDGE 'MOVIE FACES'

Staff Checking Myriad Entries

"Movie Faces" entries from readers of the Boston Evening American are now passing through the hands of a large staff of checkers in a special department at 100 Summer street.

Many thousands of movie fans have tried their skill at "Movie Faces" by assembling the faces of film actors and actresses and identifying them correctly.

Within a few weeks the names of the lucky ones will be announced with the news of their share of the $3000 in cash awards. The top award is $1000, the second is $500. Altogether 185 checks will go to winners.

The task of careful checking and rechecking by the staff and the final selections to be made by the judges will require many days. All readers of the Boston Evening American who have taken part in the "Movie Faces" Game are asked to be patient during this task.

Announcements telling the date of the publication of the winners will be made in time for everyone to know when to expect them.

NEEDLE PICKETS ROUTED BY RAIN

Verbal arguments with police officers and cries of derision featured the beginning of the second week of the Boston garment strike today.

Picket lines were reduced to a minimum by the driving rain and violence was absent.

Workers of non-union shops reporting for work were heckled, but the police detail, rushing into action, stopped any acts of slugging or violence.

Bay State 41st On Relief Lists

Forty states received a higher percentage of federal aid than Massachusetts last year, according to a report today by the Boston Municipal Research Bureau, based on government statistics.

Massachusetts received 63.8 per cent of its relief funds from the federal government. Thirty-four states received 75 per cent or more.

The percentage received here last year was, however, 8 per cent higher than in the previous year.

New Hampshire and Rhode Island stood alone, both years, as the only states receiving less than 50 per cent. Some southern states received virtually all their relief funds from federal sources.

MRS. BANNISTER ON TRIAL IN 'HOAX BABY' CASE

was polled by Clerk James Sherren at the opening of court. The dock was empty, the courtroom crowded.

Hughes moved for trial of "the case of the King against May Bannister," and Chief Justice J. H. Barry ordered the woman brought before the bar. A few minutes later she arrived, sobbing, accompanied by the matron. She wore a blue hat, a brown coat, fur-trimmed, a string of pearls about her neck.

She held a handkerchief to her mouth.

SELECTING JURY

Selection of the jury began with Lambert, as he did at the trial of Arthur, challenging each talesman for cause and seeking to learn whether he had been prejudiced by the newspapers in this case or evidence at the previous trial.

Mrs. Bannister's sobs were an undertone for the entire proceedings. Her mouth, covered by a handkerchief, she occasionally gave a little cry of:

"Oh!"

Of the first eight jurors called, three were sworn and seated. Roland Fleming, a member of the jury that convicted Arthur Bannister, was found indifferent, but challenged peremptorily by the defense.

SEVERAL RELEASED

Several were found to have formed opinion which they did not think any evidence would change and challenges in these cases were sustained.

Pickard Oulton, member of the Arthur Bannister jury, said he had an opinion and would prefer not to serve. He was found not indifferent.

Mrs. Bannister, except for her shaking shoulders, did not move. She sat head bowed, handkerchief covering her face, and whether she heard the proceedings it was impossible to tell. Lambert once attempted to console her, but her weeping continued.

Mrs. Bannister is accused in an indictment of three counts with the kidnaping.

Her elder son, Daniel, 21, waits trial for kidnaping and murder in this most bewildering and bizarre Canadian case of crime.

As she was at the trial of her brother, Frances Bannister, 15, will be called as the Crown's star witness.

GIRL AGAINST MOTHER

It will be daughter pitted against mother when she takes the witness stand, and her testimony against slack-jawed Arthur Bannister, with it it welded the case of the Crown came like an obsessed tooth.

Whether or not the extraction of truth will be more difficult in the case of daughter—facing mother remains to be seen. Court room drama will reach a peak.

Accompanied by police matrons, Frances went for a long walk up over the wooded hill that leads to Sackville, 10 miles away. Snow still banked the road but the "soft" weather of yesterday has left the sleigh ruts down nearly to the dirt. It's almost spring.

This shire town of the hill county of Westmoreland again was thronged as petit jurors and witnesses answered the call by the Sheriff Isaac Newton Killam for the second trial.

"Come now," was the telegram sent to Omar Lutes and his wife at Pacific Junction, over the same wires on which, on the noon of January 8, Lutes dot-dashed to Moncton the first word that Lake was dead in his fired cabin, his wife and son dead in the drifted ballast pit road between the wood—their infant daughter missing.

TRIAL DRAMA FORECAST

Once from the defendant's place, she called out that there was too much lying going on in court and that she was provoked to the point where she would throw something.

On the witness stand at the time was Albert A. Powell, married and a father, who testified that he conducted Sunday school at the Berry Hills Home of the accused woman and that he contributed to the support of the family.

The Crown contended originally that May Bannister wanted a baby with which to compromise her admirers and that she procured the theft of little Betty Lake after having failed to convince callers at her home that a life-sized doll she paraded in public in a blanket was an honest-to-goodness baby.

EVIDENCE AS TO MOTIVE

Powell testified at the trial of Arthur Bannister that he once sat opposite the youth in the Bannister home looking across at Arthur into the loaded rifle which a jury yesterday decided sent a bullet into the brain of Philip Lake.

Arthur's trial was for murder.

The kidnaping of the baby was held by the Crown, and supported by the jury, to have been sufficient reason for the slaying of Lake.

Now will come evidence of the motive for the kidnaping.

Still on hand is the slim and sallow Marshall Ring, legal husband of the woman known as Bertha Lake at the time of her death, recently married to another. He said he was staying to "see it through." The defense at Arthur's trial argued that he might have had a motive for the crime; the jury said in less than three hours that this was poppycock.

LEARNS SON'S FATE

May Bannister, a sullen woman given to fiery outbursts and prolonged spells of silence, was reported to have learned last night that in another wing of the jail her son Arthur was waiting to be sentenced to hang.

Daniel Bannister, too, learned the news.

No announcement was available regarding their reception of it.

Sentence of Arthur Bannister to hang by the neck until he is dead was deferred by the chief justice until the remaining trials. Murray Lambert, defense attorney, announced he would probably proceed with an appeal based upon the claim that some of the convicting evidence was inadmissible.

This appeal, if made, will be to the Supreme Court of Canada at Ottawa. Beyond that lies the privy council in England to which few criminal cases are ever taken.

Although the Crown may call 42 witnesses against the woman, 10 more than were needed against the son, the testimony of most of these is expected to be short and the trial may require only four or five days. Peter J. Hughes, K. C., and G. F. G. Bridges will again prosecute for the Crown; Lambert will defend.

Slate Protests Denied by O'Hearn

Protests to Chairman Joseph McGrath of the Democratic state committee against failure to include William J. Coughlan on the slate of delegates from the ninth congressional district may have been made but they were not made by him, Chairman E. A. O'Hearn of the Brookline town committee declared today.

KIDNAP TRIAL OF "HOAX MOTHER" STARTS

Mrs. May Bannister went on trial in snow bound Dorchester, N. B., today on a charge of sending her children to kidnap Betty Lake, baby daughter of the slain Philip Lake and his common-law wife Bertha. Her son, Arthur Bannister, 19, was convicted by the Crown yesterday of murdering Lake.

10-Year Term Given Dancing Master

Louis Lerner, 33, a Back Bay dancing master, today was sentenced to 10 to 15 years in state prison by Judge David F. Dillon in Suffolk Superior court, because he was found guilty of serious charges involving a young Allston girl.

Lerner collapsed as the sentence was pronounced and was carried from the courtroom to an anteroom where court attaches revived him.

Another charge of which he was convicted brought a sentence of 3 to 4 years in State Prison, but this sentence was ordered to run concurrently with the previous term.

Lerner was convicted of an attack on Miss Frances Glaser, 21, of Commonwealth avenue, Allston, a radio entertainer.

Miss Glaser testified Lerner invited her to a Hemenway street apartment last October, when she was a student at his dancing school, and that the attack took place there.

An old charge, which resulted in Lerner being surrendered on probation, was filed by Judge Dillon.

Mother Settles Suit for Boy, 11

Springfield, March 12—Begun only yesterday, the $10,000 alienation of affections suit centering around custody of an 11-year-old Chicopee boy was settled out of court today.

In the suit, Mrs. Irene Camyre Downey of Chicopee charged that the affection of her son, Edward Camyre, had been alienated by her aunt, Mrs. Lillie Gervais, also of Chicopee, and that the aunt refused to surrender him to his mother.

Edward had been living with the aunt since 1925, five years before his father died.

Yesterday a jury was empanelled in superior court and the plaintiff's counsel made his opening. Today, however, Judge Joseph A. Sheehan was informed that the case had been settled. Although the terms were not revealed, it was understood that the boy would be returned to his mother.

Smith Victorious In Delegate Joust

New York, March 12 (AP)—Alfred E. Smith gained a victory today in his fight to carry his opposition to the Roosevelt Raw Deal to the Philadelphia convention as a delegate.

The Board of Elections threw out the petition designating Joseph T. O'Neill, Staten Island insurance salesman, as a candidate for delegate from the Eleventh Congressional district, embracing all Staten Island and lower Manhattan.

The board held the O'Neill petition was 300 valid signatures short of the 750 required by law.

LOBBY PROBERS HINT FIGHT ON U. S. RULING

Washington, March 12 (INS)—A bitter Senate fight over the investigating powers of its committees loomed today as an aftermath of the Senate lobby committee's temporary court defeat in an effort to subpoena files of telegraph companies.

Already a move was under way in the committee to move for contempt proceedings against the telegraph company which a District of Columbia Supreme Court justice enjoined from giving up its files.

If the committee chairman, Senator Black (D), of Alabama, can secure a majority approval of the move in committee, it will come up in the Senate for action.

Republicans have protested the committee's tactics, and if a contempt resolution should come to the floor the Capitol would reverberate with a roar of verbal fireworks.

The investigators cannot appeal the case in which the court enjoined the Western Union Telegraph Company. The committee entered the case simply as a friend of the court.

The only possible appeal would have to come from the telegraph company, defendant, and in this instance, the defendant has no intention of filing an appeal.

As a result of this situation, the temporary injunction which the court granted will probably be made permanent on Friday. On that day, attorneys for the plaintiffs, who were granted the injunction, the Chicago law firm headed by Silas H. Strawn, will go to court to ask that it be made permanent, and there will be no opposition.

Morahan Seeks Vote Recount

As he left City Hall with the papers upon which he must secure the signatures of 50 registered voters in Ward 22, Morahan stated that he would file the petition by tomorrow night.

NEW FOE Of Raw Deal IN RACE

SULLIVAN UP FOR DELEGATE

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Despite decision of former Governor Joseph B. Ely, spearhead of the "raw deal's objectors in Massachusetts, not to contest the pledged Roosevelt convention delegate slate, Democratic voters throughout the state who wish to register their disapproval of the present national administration stand a good chance of getting that opportunity.

Former Representative Alexander F. Sullivan of East Boston, twice elected by his district to the House, and an able campaigner, was today getting signatures on his nomination papers as an unpledged delegate-at-large.

Sullivan must get at least 250 signatures from not less than four counties in order to get his name on the ballot. He has chosen the counties of Suffolk, Essex, Middlesex and Norfolk.

In Suffolk and Essex counties success is already assured. Today he expects to make sure of both counties through additional signatures to protect his papers from challenges.

In his personal canvas of the voters, especially in Lynn, Sullivan declared that he has found tremendous strength for the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice.

In aspiring for a place on the delegate-at-large slate, Sullivan directly is bucking Governor Curley, Senator Walsh, Senator Coolidge and other party leaders.

"I feel that the Democratic voters are entitled to vote against the Raw Deal as well as for it," Sullivan declared today. "Who do these so-called leaders think they are, anyway?

"I am opposed to letting the pledged Roosevelt slate slip in here without a contest. I am doing everything I can to get on the ballot in the interest of those of my party who would refuse to go to the polls. I am endeavoring to give them the opportunity to exercise their franchise.

"In one respect the decision of former Governor Ely not to put an opposition slate in the field is a break for me, for the Roosevelt supporters will look ridiculous trying to tie me up with any such organization as the American Liberty League. My record of service for the little fellow, as well as my independence, is open to everybody in the Legislature."

First of Lecture Series Held At Engineers Club

By BETTY ALDEN

IT FREQUENTLY HAPPENS that the small aristocratic gatherings we stumble upon by steering our course away from the main route of social activities and venturing into the sober, aristocratic by-ways of old Boston, turn out to be the most delightful and give us a glimpse into the cultural interests of our Back Bay socialites . . .

Last evening we attended one of these gatherings, and it was noteworthy from a social, as well as educational and intellectual point of view . . . It was the first of a series of Wednesday evening lectures sponsored by a group of socialites interested in the Boston Society of Architects and the Boston Architectural Club, and took place in the massive stone assembly room of the Boston Architects Club on Somerset street . . .

ESTHER BEMIS

About eight-thirty the subscribers began to arrive and for about a half-hour before the lecture began there was an informal reception in the cozy library where mellow candlelight gleamed on row after row of architectural tomes in their colorful red and gold bindings . . . This informal reception added greatly to the friendliness and enjoyment of the evening, for everyone soon became acquainted with others present and chatted over their coffee cups . . . Ordinarily those who attend a lecture file in and take their seats, nod or wave a program to friends in their immediate vicinity and sit back to await the arrival of the speaker, with no opportunity for sociability . . .

Mrs. H. Addington Bruce, chairman of this series of lectures, was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Horatio Lamb, whose generous gifts have provided many of the volumes in the library, Mrs. Edward Jackson Holmes and Mrs. Harold D. Walker . . . Mrs. Bruce wore an exquisite gown of dove gray lace, made very simply with long sleeves, a low back and panniers low on the skirt . . . Mrs. Holmes' wine red color scheme blended with the fittings of the library and Mrs. Lamb was attired in black velvet with sleeves of delicate chiffon . . . Pouring coffee behind the massive oak library table, Mrs. Walker looked very small and pretty in a gold metal cloth tunic over black . . .

Mrs. H. Daland Chandler in Black Crepe

THE SPEAKER, Charles D. Maginnis, prominent Boston architect, was greeted by many distinguished socialites at this little reception before his lecture . . . Among them were Mr. and Mrs. T. Mott Shaw, the latter wearing a lovely gown of gold and bronze printed satin with gold accessories, and accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. H. Daland Chandler, with Mrs. Chandler in black crepe with a pointed train which she caught up to reveal crimson heeled slippers . . .

Mrs. W. Penn Cresson, daughter of Daniel Chester French, famous sculptor, was quite attractive in sandy grey moire with a chinchilla cape, and Mrs. W. Rodman Peabody was accompanied by her daughter, Anne, who wore a black dinner gown with a soft turquoise blue velvet bodice . . . Miss Aimee Lamb chose a gown of brown lace with matching jacket and others noted were Mrs. Charles Gaston Smith in filmy black lace, Mrs. George Lee, whose gown combined black taffeta with net, Dean Hudnut of the Harvard Architectural School, Hubert Ripley with his son, Hubert Ripley, Jr., Philip Orcutt, Harold Walker and Charles G. Loring, the two latter being members of the sponsors committee . . .

In the course of their globe trotting the Dudley R. Howes of Brookline and their daughter, Phyllis, have reached Honolulu where they are having a veritable social whirl . . . Among the parties in their honor was a large one given by the Walter S. Dillinghams . . .

* * *

Dinners to Precede Junior Supper Dance

TWO OTHER DINNERS planned to precede the next Junior Supper Dance on March 20, are being given by Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge, Jr., of Brookline for their young married contemporaries, and one by Polly Winslow for some of her post deb friends and their boy friends . . . It is quite natural that the young marrieds and post debs should make the most of their opportunity to attend the famous Supper Dances while they can, for the invitation list is limited to include only girls between their second and tenth years out . . .

* * *

Because of college vacations and the lull in social activities which always preceded the Easter parade, many young people take advantage of the opportunity to head for Bermuda and a little sunshine . . . And this year the exodus begins next Wednesday when a lot of debs will sail for a two-week holiday . . . Among them will be Mary Hastings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hastings of Beacon street, and her travelling companions will be Betty Ware of Westwood, Alloe Plimpton, and Carolyn Pierce . . .

* * *

Miss Esther Bemis and her mother, Mrs. Harry H. Bemis of Chestnut Hill, are giving a dinner party this evening for Peggy Leland and her fiance, James Weir, whose marriage will take place Saturday in Brookline . . . Caroline Simonds, who like Miss Bemis, is to be a bridesmaid, has already given a shower for the bride-to-be, and on Saturday just before the wedding, the entire bridal party will be entertained at luncheon by Mr. and Mrs. John D. Leland of Chestnut Hill . . .

Chatty Notes of Society

MRS. BENJAMIN D. SHREVE, Mrs. William A. Gaston, Mrs. William C. Endicott and Mrs. Stephen W. Sleeper acted as pourers at the tea which followed the annual meeting of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities at the Harrison Gray Otis House, yesterday afternoon.

* * *

MRS. JAMES J. STORROW of Chestnut Hill gave a dinner at the St. Regis Hotel in New York city, Tuesday evening in honor of Lady Cubitt, wife of the retiring governor of Bermuda, Sir T. Astley Cubitt. The party later went on to the theater to see Jane Cowl in "First Lady." Among the guests were Colonel Roemer Lee and Mrs. Lee of Gilhampton, Somerset, England, Miss Llewellyn S. Parsons and Miss Evelina Robertson.

Yesterday Mrs. Storrow reembarked for Bermuda, where she is spending the winter. She came up to New York two weeks ago accompanied by Lady Cubitt.

SPRING STYLES Feature Club Luncheon

HELEN PLEASANTON FAITH CHIPMAN HELEN MASON

Woman's City Club Holds Fashion Parade

WITH THE EASTER PARADE just a month away, Milady's thoughts are naturally turning to the newest styles for spring. The members of the Woman's City Club got their first glimpse of what Dame Fashion has decreed will be this season's mode, at the annual spring luncheon and fashion show held at the clubhouse.

Club members and their daughters modeled the bright summery frocks and hats. Mrs. Albert C. Titcomb acted as chairman of the meeting, in place of Mrs. Reeve Chipman, president of the club, who was one of the mannequins. Mrs. Titcomb looked quite fetchingly businesslike in a beige tweed suit and a brown hat.

Other members who joined Mrs. Chapman in the fashion parade were Mrs. Alexander Steinert, Mrs. Herbert L. Ewer, Mrs. H. MacKnight Francnot, Mrs. William J. Underwood, Mrs. Samuel J. Newman and Mrs. Murray Hall. The younger models were Dorothy Mckey, Betty Titcomb, Ruth Edmands, Faith Chipman, Helen Mason, Helen Pleasanton and Betty and Joan Sagendorph.

Mrs. George Sagendorph, dressed in sober black with the exception of a dashing silk scarf of all colors of the rainbow, proudly watched her two daughters, from a point of vantage at one of the tables. Mrs. John McKey was another proud mother for her daughter, Dorothy, was one of the models.

In one large group which had a merry time discussing the clothes and trying to decide which they fancied most were Mrs. Donald McElwain, who looked like a model herself in a creation of deep red with a matching velvet ascot and a brown hat; Mrs. Walter Powers wearing a blue ensemble, a navy dress with bands of lighter blue on the sleeves and light blue flowers at the throat, and a navy blue stitched beret; Mrs. Richard Lane in wine colored silk; and Mrs. Burton Hamilton who had chosen a striking dress of garnet red.

At other tables were Mrs. William P. Everts, brown under a beaver cape; Mrs. David Edwards, Mrs. Henry Stickney, Mrs. Robert Cushman in a dark suit with a green and gold metal cloth blouse.

Books on Parade

By MILES ALDEN

An absorbing novel of an English genius living on an island in the Mediterranean and a pair of better-than-average mystery stories provide a balanced ration for the week's reading.

IMPASSIONED PYGMIES—Keith Winter—Doubleday, Doran.

One is apt to be suspicious of yet another novel about a group of English people living on an island in the Mediterranean. This is particularly true if among these Englishmen there is an English genius surrounded by his eccentric family and disciples, all of whom are bound to bring back memories of Sanger's circus in "The Constant Nymph."

Yet out of this dubious and timetried formula Mr. Winter has written as fine and sensitive a novel as has appeared for some time.

On the island of Miramar is living one of the great geniuses of modern times, E. L. Marius. Rather, it should be said that he was a genius for his time has past and now he is seeking escape from he knows not what. With him are his son, Rollo, and his wife, Helga. Moreover he is surrounded by a group of disciples, a repellant lot, who bicker among themselves for the great man's favors and prepare to write his biography as soon as he is dead.

To the island come Marius' son, Saul, who has more than a touch of his father's lost greatness, a young English couple, and Andrew Jordan, England's youngest, cleverest, and wealthiest dramatist. It is the emotional currents created by the interplay of these personalities that make up the story.

The book is brilliantly written. Mr. Winter not only has a gift for creative writing but also a keen insight in character delineation.

* * *

THE CASE OF THE MISSING DIARY—A. Fielding—H. Kinsey. Mr. Dawnay was found murdered in his garden house by a blunt instrument, presumably Gipsey Joe's cudgel. Did Gipsey Joe kill him? Or was it cousin Sebastian who might, or might not, be an imposter? Or was it the mysterious housekeeper, Miss Miller?

Inspector Pointer of Scotland Yard solves the problem after 250 pages of neatly reasoned and close fitting deduction. The book should appeal to veteran fans who prefer logic to thrills.

* * *

Here is a thrills for the most hardened fan. Mr. Masterman has taken a page from the works of E. Phillips Oppenheim and Francis Beeding and if he cannot serve them up with all the experience and skill of the old masters he has at least made a good try.

A secret society, the D. U. A. (Deutschland Uber Alles) is preparing a bit of refined skullduggery at Geneva and it is up to Sir Arthur Sinclair to stop them. Lonely castles, beautiful spies and sinister cripples are some of the things he has to comoat and if you think that he is finally defeated you haven't read many thrillers.

Margaret Sullavan Paramount Star

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service.

Los Angeles, March 12—Margaret Sullavan goes to Paramount for "I Love a Soldier" and Carole Lombard to Universal for "My Man Godfrey"—to be co-starred with William Powell. Of course it's a trade and a grand one.

Paramount was almost at the deep end trying to salvage the Marlene Dietrich story for which they have been paying Charles Boyer for weeks and weeks. But now Maggie Sullavan, a swell actress in any language, steps in and saves the day.

Louella O. Parsons

Carole, who will bring dollars into the Universal coffers with "Love Before Breakfast," has been the choice of Universal for months for "My Man Godfrey" which Gregory La Cava is to direct. But Carole is under contract to Para, so what could be simpler than a trade—one Carole for one Maggie—and a pretty even swap I'd call it, for both are fine actresses and swell gals.

Jock Whitney, young millionaire producer who is so much a part of Hollywood's social and film life, is on his way to London. He goes for two reasons. One is to try for honors with his horse in the Grand National and the other is to arrange to produce abroad. While in London he will confer with Alexander Korda relative to making two color films in England for Pioneer and for the Selznick Company, in which he is a partner.

Just before Mr. Whitney left, he said if plans materialize to take Jumbo, the stage play in which he is financially interested, on the road May 1, it will be done under a big circus tent. The company will travel in special cars and the whole play will be presented in typical circus fashion.

Joan Bennett's husband, Gene Markey, travels with her to Europe and thereby hangs an interesting story. Gene goes to Gaumont-British to adapt his own book, "The Road to Rouen" for Constance Bennett. Gene, who wrote this story in 1930, has had a bewildering series of events in connection with it. He sold it to Paramount first for Connie Bennett who was unable to make it.

In the years following, Ina Claire, Ruth Chatterton, Ann Harding Norma Shearer and Marlene Dietrich were all mentioned for it. And now, after six years, it reverts to Constance Bennett for whom it was originally intended.

If Maria Korja looks anything like her photographs and film tests, she will take Hollywood by storm. Well, we will all get a chance to see her when she arrives here the last of the month. She arrives in America the 16th and flies to Hollywood immediately to begin work on her first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "The Life of Johann Strauss." Miss Korja is half Swedish and half Polish and she is being loaned to MGM, as we announced before, by the Berlin Opera Company.

Snapshots of Hollywood

BARRY GARGAN, the pride and joy of his dad, BILL GARGAN, down with measles; GLENDA FARRELL and ADDISON RANDALL again in one of their best battles; what can we do? FRANCIS LANGFORD suffering from wisdom tooth trouble; CONSTANCE COLLIER sending to London for her antique furniture; SIDNEY KINGSLEY, author of "Men In White" and "Dead End," in Hollywood spending some of the thousands he received from the latter play; DICK POWELL sufficiently recovered from his laryngitis to give a party in honor of GLORIA BLONDELL, sister of Joan. That's all today, see you tomorrow.

Gayety's New Bill

A new vaudeville program began today at the New Gayety Theater, with "The Informer" continuing as the screen feature until Saturday. "Navy Wife" is the other film at the Gayety.

Dietrich Film, Mills Brothers at Met

The Metropolitan Theater will have "Desire," Marlene Dietrich's latest picture and a stage show starring the Mills Brothers and Louis Armstong and his Orchestra as its attractions the week beginning Friday.

"Desire" is the first picture in which Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper have co-starred since their great film success "Morocco." This is a different type of picture from their last venture, however, being a romantic comedy, not a heavy drama such as their other film. "Desire" is reported to be the best of all the Dietrich pictures to date with a daring adventuresome romance between these two good-looking folk for its main subject.

"Harlemania" is the name of the ambitious all colored musical revue which comprises the Metropolitan's stage entertainment. The famous Louis Armstrong and his band, noted for their hot swing music, and the Mills Brothers will headline the show. The latter are the outstanding colored musical favorites of stage, screen and radio. The rest of the bill has such favorites as Sonny Woods, Chuck and Chuckles, Miss Bobbe Gr[illegible] ion and the Three Queens as headliners.

Where to Go

Film's Fourth Week

"Follow the Fleet," the newest Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers musical film, entered its fourth and final week at the Keith's Memorial Theater today, after setting up a new attendance record at this theater in its first week.

This picture has proved as popular with audiences and critics as the other Rogers-Astaire screen hits, "The Gay Divorcee," "Top Hat," and "Roberta." The music, which was written by Irving Berlin, is being heard all around town since the film's showing. Some of the best tunes are: "We Saw the Sea," to which Astaire sings and dances in the picture; "Let's Face the Music and Dance," which he and Ginger dance and sing together, and "Let Yourself Go," Miss Rogers' solo number.

Harriet Hilliard, radio songstress, makes her screen debut in "Follow the Fleet." She sings, "Get Thee Behind Me, Satan," and "Here Am I, But Where Are You?"

HOLLAND MUSICAL Show Coming To Shubert Next Week

By GEORGE HOLLAND

The only new musical show proposed for the waning 1935-36 season is "On Your Toes," which Dwight Deere Wiman will present a week from Saturday evening at the Shubert Theater.

George Holland

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Shall Young Wife Divorce Model Husband Jailed For Old Crime?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Two years ago, when I was 18, I married a man whom I love. My family were greatly pleased, for he seemed clean and honest. A year passed and we were blissfully happy. A girl never had a kinder husband.

Then, one day, he was arrested on charges dating back to an incident in a distant city, three years previous to our marriage. We had no money to engage a lawyer, so a two-year prison sentence resulted.

Miss Fairfax, my heart bleeds when I visit my dear, young husband in that grim place. I KNOW he is innocent.

Unfortunately, my belief is not shared by my family. They constantly urge me to divorce my husband and they promise to take me home again when I am no longer "the wife of a convict."

Today is my second wedding anniversary and I am alone, without my husband, my family or any of my former friends. Still, I am not REALLY alone, for before the month is over there will come a "little stranger" to make stronger the bond that holds me to my husband.

Do you think I am doing right by standing by my husband? Or should I take my family's advice and divorce him?

CONVICT'S WIFE.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The union of a man and a woman is greater than the judgments of the world. That is why Convict's Wife should remain loyal to her husband and the father of the baby she now awaits.

When he has served his term and obtains his release, this man should take his wife and child to a far-away city and begin life anew. The prison term which family and friends call a disgrace can be transformed into a wonderful and secret tie that will forever bind the more closely [illegible]rows that made them one.

[illegible] with pleasure that I send [illegible] Wife a check for five [illegible] letter is the best [illegible] a day. I know she will use [illegible]oney to buy a little some[illegible] her baby. [illegible]s is another interesting

[illegible] MISS FAIRFAX:

[illegible]husband is a "street angel" [illegible] "home devil." He has a [illegible]ob and makes enough for [illegible]es on. But he absolutely [illegible] to go anywhere. He stays [illegible] house every night and [illegible]ives me crazy with his [illegible]ling criticisms.

[illegible]e there is not another [illegible] the world who would [illegible]e terrible things he [illegible]s four children, the [illegible]g" 18. In spite of the [illegible]ch.ldren would be a [illegible]any father, my husband [illegible] ever ordering them out of [illegible]ouse and never wants them [illegible]hing.

[illegible]ndays he forces me and the children to go so early mass. He [illegible]es on going alone to the later [illegible]

[illegible]newest whim is rubbing [illegible]d over the children's shoes [illegible]12 times a day to see [illegible]or they are bringing dirt [illegible]to the house. He is always go[illegible]ng from room to room to find whether furniture has been scratched or dishes cracked. He's positively unbearable.

In addition to this, he has declared a new policy of the most rigid economy for the home. He won't give me a cent to buy the clothes we need so badly, and he is constantly figuring how to cut down on this and how to save on that. From morning to night he's eternally preaching "save your pennies." Sometimes I think I'll go insane listening to him.

What, in view of these circumstances, would you do, Miss Fairfax? I value your advice, for I have followed your column for years. MRS. M.

DEAR WOMAN:

The thing for you to do is to go immediately to your family physician and place your problem in his hands. Talk to him frankly, as you have talked to me.

Your letter indicates definite mental illness on the part of your husband.

This being a saint outside and a devil inside the home is very frequently a sign of a serious mental disorder. Your husband's fears of impending tragedy that cause him to resort to such unnecessary economy is another cause for worry.

Surely a man who feels it necessary to wipe his children's feet lest they bring dirt into the house requires prompt medical treatment.

All of us hate to recognize the presence of possible mental disorders in our families. But we are very foolish to put off going to a physician as soon as we become suspicious. Early care can often effect a cure. Delay usually means the insane asylum.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 18 and I have been keeping company with a boy one year my senior. He is a fine fellow and I think a lot of him.

However, I am sure he spends altogether too much money on me. As I never was accustomed to extravagance, I would like to tell him that it is unnecessary for him to continue his lavish entertainments. Would you tell him, if you were I? D. E. B.

DEAR LITTLE FRIEND:

Of course, I'd tell him. He'll like you all the more if you let him know that it is he and not his money that you love.

The known young men to actually starve themselves to give their girl friends good times. It's all so unnecessary that I have no sympathy with girls who encourage such extravagance.

Tell him by all means.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am 19. I have worked for four years and give most of my money to my poor mother, who needs it desperately. She is paralyzed and will never walk again.

Some time ago I met a fine young man who asked me to marry him. I'd like to become his wife, but I hesitate because he works on the WPA and does not earn much.

What would you do, Miss Fairfax? "JOE."

DEAR LITTLE GIRL:

I'd keep my job and continue to help my mother. That's what I would do if I were you. I'd not think of marriage until the man who was going to be my husband had a more secure job than the WPA offers.

At 19 you do not have to be hasty, dear child. Stay with your mother a few years longer. You will never regret it.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Synthetic Sun-Tan

POSED BY SHIRLEY DEANE

Golden-Bronze Make-Up

By DONNA GRACE

THERE is an air about these tanned and freckled young persons who are filtering in from the South and California resorts.

They have the complexion that is always a smart contrast to our colorful clothes. It is a distinction that any girl must covet in this interim season of pale faces.

This may be why so many of the stay-at-home girls are anxious to begin their summer skin tones. They are already asking for a short cut to a ruddy tan.

We are tired of winter effects and everything in here to give us the urge to change things. Changes are good for us, but we advise you to hear with your colorless complexions for a while longer and be thankful for the opportunity to give your skin and whole system a rest and reconditioning before the inevitable summer heat is upon us.

As a matter of fact, even the bronzed stars will lose this premature tint in no time after they are back home. There is no need of hurrying or drying the skin with lamps or harsh winds, when there is such an agreeable substitute as sun tone we like. All we have to do is make up for the part. There are lovely dark foundations and powders that will match all the shades we adore without a moment's sunning, at any season.

The comfort of removing these dark shades and renewing them at will while we protect our natural smooth skin is more fun than having a real tan.

Dark powders are effective but for dark make-up you need to blend in a smooth foundation over the face and neck. When putting on a foundation do not leave a hard edge around the hairline, or the effect will be grotesque. It must not succeed, look but a real natural tone to select one that harmonizes with your hair and eyes, rather than your natural skin tones. You will have to try on your color, every kind of foundation, your complexion.

You will need a make-up chart and I will be glad to send it to one if you will enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope and address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American.

BLOTTO CAPTURES N.E.

New Entries Cover Wide Field

There are many popular indoor sports, but judging from the amount of mail received daily by the Boston Evening American, the greatest indoor sport in New England is BLOTTO.

And why? Because it's so easy, so simple, so fascinating. It's easy to make a BLOTTO, but not so easy to make a good BLOTTO. A little practice, a little patience may win you a cash prize. Or you might win even with your first BLOTTO.

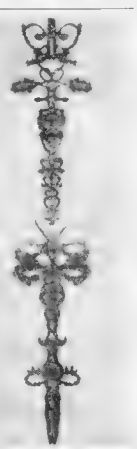
Here's how. Fold a smooth sheet of paper. Write your name on the crease. Use only black ink. Fold the paper again, while the ink is wet. There you have your BLOTTO.

Women folk again won top prizes today with Agnes M. Sheard of 1409 River street, Hyde Park, gaining the $10 first prize, and Mrs. Daniel Herpin of 33 Hamilton street, Wollaston, capturing second, a $5 award.

Ten others receive $1 each. They are: Miss Helen Dickendorff, 12 Williams street, Malden; Walter C. Doe, 332 Bunker Hill street, Charlestown; Armand Simeone, 56 Adrian street, Somerville; Gerda E. Worthley, 18 Ash street, Cambridge; Anne F. Mackie, 53A First street, Medford; Mrs. A. Hines, 84 Pearl street, Charlestown; Fred R. Randolph, 89 Kittredge street, Roslindale; Margaret F. Horan, 61 Walk Hill street, Forest Hills; Helen M Sundstrom, 67 Myrtle avenue Fitchburg; Mrs. Frank D. Merrill, 81 Union street, Holbrook; Mrs Helen Louise Mountaine, 39 Irving street, Cambridge.

The next fifteen will receive a pair of guests tickets for the motion picture "Follow The Fleet" featuring Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Harriet Hilliard, and Randolph Scott playing at Keith's Memorial: Madeline Connors, 181 Foster street, Brighton; Rose Rosenthal, 21 Thorndike street, Everett; Jean A. Allen, 7 South Central Terrace, Wollaston; Eleanor Robbins, 24 Haskell avenue Everett; Margaret Edwards, 41 Stallman road, Roslindale; Robert Miles Ray, 164 Grove street, West Medford; Patrick F. Dalton, 10 Bristol street, Salem.

Mrs. Lawrence Kenney, 39 Nathan road, Waltham; Loiel Spinucci, 7 Greenville court, Somerville; Edw. H. Houghton, 32 Prospect street, Charlestown; George Kenneth Lyons, 66 Summer street, Melrose; Ronald J. Steele, 106 Austin street, Cambridge; Helen E. Baker, 275 Parkland avenue, Lynn; Mary Edith Harris, 287 Meridian street, East Boston and Barbara Drake, 56 Pembroke street, Newton.



Agnes M. Sheard of 409 River street, Hyde Park, found Blotto making fascinating. Her skill was rewarded with the $10 first prize.

MEN WILL ENJOY THESE RICH-FLAVORED DISHES

Meat Favorites Have Real Appeal

By MARTHA LEE

HAM STEAK CREOLE

1 slice ham
1 cup cooked noodles
1 tsp. onion
¼ clove garlic
1 tsp. chives
6 chopped olives
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
3 tsps. chili sauce
½ cup tomato sauce or thick tomato soup

Broil the ham lightly, till tips are golden brown. Place on a hot platter and garnish with hot noodles. Fry the chopped onions, add garlic and sauces. Boil one minute. Remove the garlic, add olives and tomato sauce and serve hot over the ham. Serves 5 or 6

HAM SOUFFLE

1 cup chopped, cooked ham
4 large soda crackers rolled into crumbs
3 hard cooked eggs
2 cups white sauce
1 tsp. mustard
2 egg whites, whipped stiff

Blend all ingredients, place in greased baking dish, set in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F., for 30 minutes. Serves 4 or 5.

LAMB CHOP STEW

5 lamb chops
3 Bermuda onions
5 peeled, raw potatoes
1 cup bouillon
½ cup water
Salt and pepper.

Roll the chops lightly on each side. Brown chops; add sliced onions to the same pan, lay chops on the onions, season, cover with sliced potatoes, season, and again a layer of onion. Cover with bouillon, cover the pan, allow to simmer slowly for one hour. May be done in the oven with greater care than on top of the stove. Use low heat, 275 deg. F.

MEAT AND VEGETABLE PIE WITH BISCUITS

4 thick pork chops
2 or 3 sour apples
4 medium sweet potatoes, 2 onions
¼ cup water
Salt and pepper.

Wipe the chops with a damp cloth and place them in the bottom of a deep casserole; peel and quarter the apples, arrange over the chops; sprinkle with salt and pepper; pare and slice potatoes one-half inch thick, pare onions and slice thin; lay over apples. Season with salt and pepper. Pour in only enough water to steam the potatoes. Too much will make the dish juicy. Bake covered for about one hour or until the chops are tender; then uncover and lay baking powder biscuits closely together, to cover the dish. Continue baking until the biscuits are baked and delicately browned. Serve from the dish.

Make biscuits of one cup flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, two tablespoons shortening; one-half cup milk. Cut with very small cutter.

Cut Flowers

HOW to have a two-purpose garden, one that will be bright with blooms all summer long, yet will provide fine bouquets?

This is a problem gardeners should consider from the start. Shrubs may as well be the kind that furnish bouquets part of the year, not merely masses of green.

Choose a fine lilac, or a Japanese cherry that will give you flowers the right size for vases and that has leaves free from insects. Or select the big, double, fragrant kind. Or the snowball hydrangea that blooms all summer on the ends of the new wood.

After the spring shrubs have had their period of glory, plant some annuals for bouquets. Asters, dahlias, zinnias, phlox, daisies and many other perennials can share honors for bouquets and garden favors as well.

The iris is a great success either in clumps against a good background or in borders four or more feet wide along walks or driveways. For bouquets, cut the sprays when one bud is just beginning to open.

Some perennials actually give more flowers if they are cut. They are mostly of the daisy family—painted daisy, Shasta daisy, doronicum (leopard's bane), gaillardia, hardy asters, hardy chrysanthemums.

Annuals that bloom better when cut are dahlias, castor beans, cosmos, sweet sultan, snapdragon, feverfew, sunflowers, marigolds, calendula, sweet alyssum and others.

Among the vines, the trumpet-creeper blooms better if the flowers are cut, and the silver lace vine is delightful on the back fence or in bouquets.

Our 40 page illustrated Home Institute booklet, "The Best Material for Garden Display and Cutting," shows you just how to plan a two-purpose garden. Discusses all your old favorites, and tells you of new flowers. How to plan one-color effects. Get a new thrill from your garden!

Poor Report Card?

Better Check up on His Eyesight!

What has eyesight to do with poor school marks? Doctors and teachers both can tell you that eyestrain and poor vision may seriously retard a child's progress in school.

Children themselves seldom realize what is happening. There are few, if any, pain warnings. It is up to parents to be alert . . . and a thorough examination by an eyesight specialist is the first step in this direction.

Hardly less important is to provide better home lighting. The eyes of the entire family will benefit. This means plenty of light, well shaded, free from glare — especially in rooms where reading, studying, or sewing is done. And the whole room should be lighted — not just parts of it. Guard your child's sight — and your own — with better light.

15 BILLION U. S. CRIME COST, SAYS HOOVER

New York, March 12 (U.P.)—Pouncing on "rotten politics" as the chief cause for the country's stupendous growth in crime, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the federal G-men, yesterday fixed the nation's crime bill at $15,000,000,000 a year.

Hoover declared in a radio address of women's clubs on "Crime and Youth," the phalanx of office holders and criminal lawyers who frustrate honest law-enforcement agencies. He demanded:

"Take the shackles off the honest policeman and put them where they belong, on the wrist of the crooks."

He estimated there are "several members of the underworld [illegible] cited the 12,000 murders last year and 145,000 major crimes.

The [illegible] Hoover asserted is the "[illegible] pea [illegible] where [illegible] a criminal is [illegible] for a score of crimes [illegible] only one [illegible] [illegible] offense. Moreover [illegible] one in every four [illegible] arrested for [illegible] convicted [illegible] and [illegible] for [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a life-time career were offered as constructive suggestions, with the proving that the crooked criminal lawyer be ousted out of all decent communities.

The Senator:

Demmies' Donkey Worried

THE SENATOR:

He sees all and knows all that's going on in Massachusetts politics and most of it he finds amusing or amazing, or both. Best of all, he tells about it. Hear him below and listen in with him regularly in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

"Timmie," says The Senator as he leans against the mahogany and chakes his glass so as to hear the ice tinkle, "what is it that has four legs and flies."

"Knowing your age, Senator," replies Timmie, "I would say that this is an old one about the time of Sol Smith Russell and is one that makes the [illegible] of the original Flordora Sextette kick out the sides of their cribs. But offhand, Senator," says Timmie, "I would say that what has four legs and flies could be a horse."

The Senator

The Senator grins a bit at this and he says in three words:

"Well, Timmie, now we have a horse of another color and this is a very worried Democratic horse but one which has no flies on it and which is trying to keep young Jim Roosevelt out of the delegate fight in Massachusetts.

"In fact, Timmie," says The Senator, "I hear that some of the Democrats here go so far as to warm the ear of Postmaster Jim Farley with hints that he see to keeping the Roosevelt lad out. And this is a peculiar circumstance, Timmie, because Governor's Councillor Dan Coakley has already proposed a district slate of delegates with Jim on it."

Timmie clinks another piece of ice into the Senator's glass to make more music.

"Slates, Senator," says Timmie naively, "are very brittle on occasions and also can be rubbed out easy with a little dampening."

Tab This One

"You are very right, Timmie," agrees The Senator, "and because you are very right I give you another little horse. I hear up on the hill that the reason a certain lady resigns recently as trustee of the state infirmary at Tewksbury, to go on the hairdressing board, is because she doesn't like a bad situation which exists down there. Tab this one, Timmie, for something to come later."

The Senator takes a sip of his ice which [illegible] then he says:

"And speaking of state institutions, Timmie, I learn that Governor Jim gets into the car last Sunday and drops in unexpected at the women's reformatory in Sherburn, where he makes an inspection. It takes nearly an hour for word of this visit to flash all over the state, Timmie, and I understand that the other places go up on their toes now, expecting that Governor Jim may drop into any place on any Sunday hereafter.

"Well, Timmie," continues The Senator, "we will swing back into straight politics again now, with some words about Governor's Councillor Win Schuster, who comes from Douglas and who is a very hot supporter of Governor Alf Landon of Kansas for the G. O. P. nomination for President.

Landon Liked

"Win Schuster makes a trip up through Vermont to see how the Landon land is, Timmie," continues The Senator, "and he reports back that the land lies very good indeed up there for the Kansan. Also he reports that John Hamilton, who resigns from the Republican National Committee to handle Landon's campaign, comes to Boston next Tuesday to jump off on a cruise through Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont and arrangements have been made to greet him with open arms."

"I lay something aside every week from my budget, Senator," says Timmie slyly, "to place a little bet on Landon's nose when I get the right pinv."

This brings a grin to The Senator's dial and he says:

"Now speaking of a budget, Timmie—and I think you are lying—reminds me of Mayor Charlie Ashley of New Bedford. John Backus, assistant secretary to Governor Jim, tells me that while everybody else apparently is sunk in expense, Mayor Charlie, who is mayor there 32 times, files a budget $109,000 less than last year. Then Ashley calmly takes a boat to Miami to visit his old friend, Colonel E. H. R. Green, and then to go to Jamaica. There is something to knowing your job, Timmie, after all."

"If you will finish your highball, Senator," says Timmie, "I will know my job by giving you a nice refill."

"Not at all, Timmie," declines The Senator. "We must be moderate in all things, and besides I must be away on my snooping."

$575,000 Rail Case Decision Awaited

Suit of the Boston & Albany and New York Central railroads to recover $575,000 from the Commonwealth in connection with the Swift river valley water development has been taken under advisement by Judge Edward F. Hanify in Suffolk Superior Court.

The railroads contend the award was made them by the Metropolitan district water supply commission for taking Athol railroad property. The Commonwealth maintains the commission was not authorized to act and that the contract is not binding.

Medical Schools Bill Near Vote

Final action is expected in the Senate today on the bill to give the state board of registration in medicine the right to approve the medical schools from which aplicants for examination to practice in the state are graduated.

Defeated on Tuesday, the measure came up for further discussion yesterday when reconsideration prevailed by a 23-13 vote.

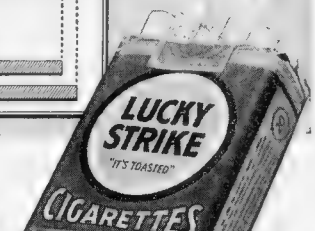
PROPER AGING

Tobacco in its natural state is harsh and strong. Though "cured" by the grower before sale, it is unsuited for use without further aging. During this aging period (which ranges in the case of Lucky Strike from 1½ to 3 years) important changes occur. These "Nature" changes result in the partial "smoothing out" of the original harsh qualities of the leaf. Our process of manufacture carries these improvements many steps further—as every Lucky Strike Cigarette exemplifies: A Light Smoke of rich, ripe-bodied tobacco.



LUCKIES ARE LESS ACID!

Recent chemical tests show* that other popular brands have an excess of acidity over Lucky Strike of from 53% to 100%.

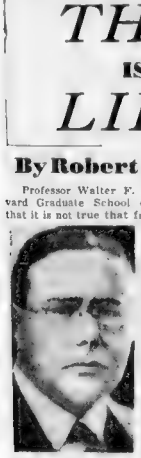
HANSEN QUITS WPA SHOW JOB

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

Professor Walter F. Dearborn of the Harvard Graduate School of Education declares that it is not true that first grade teachers can predict in individual cases whether a child will be a success or failure in life.



ROBERT E. ROGERS

Apparently the Harvard News office issued a statement purporting to be a summary of the results of the Harvard "growth" study, by which students in grade schools are tested in their earlier years and then after a significant period are checked up to see how they have turned out. But the News office did not get it entirely correct, according to Professor Dearborn.

The Harvard studies have little or nothing to say about individual cases. And certainly there is no reason to suppose that any teacher, however shrewd, can make any prophecies about individual cases.

All that is claimed is that, on the basis of a long-time study of averages, those former students who are now employed were given slightly higher ratings in school than those who are at present not employed.

This is a reasonable statement, although it must run counter in many cases to individual experience. It should, however, correct that widely held belief that during the past six years unemployment has had no relation to individual competence or efficiency. Naturally the man or woman who lacks employment while others continue in their jobs would prefer to feel that the whole business is merely a matter of universal hard luck, a matter of politics, or pull, or mere good luck, rather than of individual superiority.

Difference in Children Marked by Teachers

That fact remains that certain children impress their teachers as being somewhat better in various ways than certain others. In the hands of experienced and conscientious teachers such opinions are not to be ignored. It is only too likely that as these children grow up and go to work, a depression will make it necessary to lay off the less able, ambitious, and effective workers in order that the better workers may be retained and the business go on.

It is not chance or accident or blind fate or bad luck. It is only what might be expected in a world of basic and inevitable inequalities. Only in a mystical sense are all men created equal.

Meticulous grading for tiny differences doesn't solve the problem at all, has no prophetic power so far as individuals are concerned. Percentage marks are pretty useless. But any experienced teacher knows that any large group of students divides itself with certainty into the superior, the passable, and the inferior students. And we believe—at least I do—that those distinctions will probably continue for the rest of these students' lives.

Money Earned Fails As Accurate Barometer

These distinctions cannot be proved entirely in terms of money earned. It is perfectly likely that a man of fairly low calibre intellectually may be fortunate enough to hold a job in a profitable business which will pay him more than the salary possible to a high calibre teacher of pure physics. Yet the latter may attain a reputation which will make him a notable figure in society while his more affluent business friend may be known in his local service club and hardly elsewhere. One must make up his mind about what he calls success.

We teachers believe we can in large measure say this; that for some twenty-five per cent of our students nothing very much can be done; that for another twenty-five per cent nothing much need be done. That for the remaining passable fifty per cent, personality will probably play as large a part as brains; luck will also play its part to a larger extent than in the other two categories; and that what we call success or failure will be more of a gamble than in the case of the recognizable superior and the undoubted inferior. All this is subject, of course, to variations in the individual problem.

In Professor Dearborn's particular problem, the correction will probably never catch up with the original misstatement. Over and over it happens that an error will go around the world and the correction will hardly be noticed. So if anybody tells you that a first grade teacher can prophesy effectively about her individual pupils' future you can just answer, "Taint so!"

Unload Cargo as German Freighter Blazes

Dever Candidacy Announcement Set

Coincident with return to oBston tonight of Attorney General Paul A. Dever, announcement of his candidacy for Governor is expected.

Dever's candidacy has been hinted in dispatches from Miami, where he has been vacationing, but this will be the official announcement.

It is understood that the attorney general has been in conference in New York with a group of his supporters, and that a statement of his intentions to run for the governorship chair has been drawn up and will be released when he arrives tonight.

The announcement is expected to scramble the [illegible] more completely, with State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley being groomed for a government job, and Lieutenant-Governor Joseph L. Hurley favored by Governor Curley as his successor.

Crown Asks Death For Dr. Ruxton

Manchester, Eng., March 12 (INS)—Closing its case against Dr. Buck Ruxton, prominent Lancaster physician, the prosecution today asked the jury to find the defendant guilty of the double murder of his wife and nursemaid, Miss Mary Jane Rogerson.

"The evidence must drive you irresistibly to this verdict," declared J. C. Jackson, prosecuting attorney, in his summation.

Meow for Ma!

Ansonia, Conn., March 12 (AP)—A mother cat played an heroic role today. Water from the swollen Naugatuck River swept a department store basement, threatening the lives of five kittens. One by one, the mother cat carried its offspring to the top of the cellar stairs. Store employees found a warm, dry spot for the litter on the main floor.

BATTLE SHIP FIRE

Chemicals Poured Into Hold

Fire which drove the North German Lloyd freighter Chemnitz 200 miles off her course to Europe into Boston harbor, was completely extinguished today after a battle of more than 24 hours.

Live steam and chemicals were poured into the number five hold of the vessel until a late hour yesterday. Although the fire was not completely out, dock workers were ordered to unload most of the cargo of cotton still smoldering onto Pier 42, where firemen quickly drenched it.

The Chemnitz was carrying 600 tons of freight, [illegible] number five hold [illegible] cotton and animal hair. The blaze was confined to a great extent to the cotton, which, it is said, will make less comparatively little.

Limited [illegible] to the single hold, the [illegible] believed not to have caused any damage to the ship itself. A thorough examination will be made today and the Chemnitz will sail again for Germany as soon as shipping of [illegible] have cleared her fit.

Firemen Called To Choking Child

The aid of the fire and police departments was enlisted today when Charles Copeniero, of Lexington street, East Boston, found his two-year-old daughter, Mary Jane, apparently choking to death.

The youngster was taken to the East Boston Relief station in a police cruising car and found to be suffering from acute tonsilitis.

Copeniero awakened this morning to find his daughter in the throes of strangulation. He was unable to contact a doctor. So he rang in a fire alarm. The fire department responded, along with a physician.

They took in the situation and the child was speeded to the relief station. She was treated for tonsilitis and then dismissed.

100 MAYORS ASK WPA CONTINUE

Wash[illegible] March 12 (INS)—The unanimous conviction of the mayors of the nation's 100 largest cities that cessation of the WPA program is absolutely essential if unemployment is to be combated was conveyed to President Roosevelt today.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, chairman of the U. S. Conference of Mayors, laid on the President's desk an exhaustive report indicating that the mayors of the big cities considered "WPA the American system in contrast to the European dole."

The report undertook to meet all criticisms leveled at WPA, extolling the usefulness of its projects, the benefits bestowed upon communities and the employment it created.

The mayors asked the minimum of $2,250,000,000 to continue work relief through the next fiscal year.

The voluminous report submitted by LaGuardia contained statements from each of the hundred mayors analyzing conditions in their communities and pointing out their reasons for insisting on the necessity of continuing WPA.

U. S. Funds Wasted, He Charges

By JOHN ULLMAN

Laurence A. Hansen today resigned as State Director of the Federal Drama Project in Massachusetts, the position from which he was suspended last week.

He told the Boston Evening American that his resignation was not an acceptance of conditions against which he had protested, but rather a move to make possible a public expose of the WPA here.

Hansen declared that mismanagement and [illegible] graft abuses are [illegible] the WPA [illegible] of the drama pro[illegible]

He [illegible] a meeting yesterday with heads of [illegible] WPA agencies, held [illegible] Park Square Building at which time he demanded a public hearing. The demand was refused.

Today he said:

"I resigned as of today, from any further affiliation with the WPA program in this state.

"I cannot and will not be identified with any organization instrumental in squandering public funds."

Hearing Denied

Hanson declared his request for a public hearing was refused by Assistant WPA Administrator Paul Edwards with the assertion he "would not be a party to a public hearing."

In addition to Edwards, those at the meeting include Mrs. Rebecca Reyher, member of the regional staff, and Leonard L. Gallagher, who was assigned as state director after Hansen's suspension.

After making known his resignation Hansen told the Boston Evening American that he had four major charges against the WPA drama setup.

"Believing that the taxpayer has the right to know the facts and that I have the right and the knowledge to present them, I offer them publicly for the consideration and action of the taxpayers. They are:

"Lack of business administrative ability in control of the WPA drama program.

"Definite failure to assume responsibility in the spending of public funds.

"Utter disregard for personal rights granted to citizens under the Constitution of the United States.

Ready to Reply

Hanson declared he told the WPA executives at the meeting that he was ready to answer at a public hearing the charges impugning his record as a WPA director, made by Hiram Motherwell, who has been in effect suspended as regional head of the drama project.

He [illegible] them he said [illegible] he was [illegible] public [illegible] [illegible] charges that he had made [illegible] Motherwell.

"Instead of [illegible] for a public hearing, which I [illegible] down, Hansen [illegible] the Boston Evening American [illegible] that I was one of the public [illegible] of conditions within the WPA organization. He said:

"Taxpayers' money is being squandered in Massachusetts by men and women in administrative offices many of whom have shown themselves incapable of handling the responsibilities they were selected to assume.

"A state director can be summarily dismissed from office by a regional director without the right of a hearing, the right granted in this country even to an alien criminal.

"I protested against what I believed, and still do believe, to be a waste of that money.

"I was then asked for my resignation. I demanded a hearing, and I was told I have no rights and cannot appeal."

"I was then discharged. I repeated my demand for a hearing. I was then suspended, the order for dismissal being revoked. Then, because the charges [illegible] had been made public I asked for a public hearing. This has been denied me."

Hansen's [illegible] broke March [illegible] first revealed in the Boston Evening American, and resulted in a hearing by WPA executives of charges of [illegible] and [illegible] abuses [illegible]

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ruth Mugglebee

There is co-ed trouble at Boston University. Since this letter speaks for itself, I am printing it in full. The Boston University News, where it was sent by an irate Practical Arts and Letters co-ed, refused to publish it.

RUTH MUGGLEBEE

"The girls of Practical Arts and Letters are just about fed up with the nice slams that have been coming from their departments (College of Business Administration). It is about time we returned some of them.

Some of you young lads ought to get a good wallloping for turning your noses up at P. A. L. Are you too good for us or are you just afraid to come over and see what we are really like?

"You have been heard to say that P. A. L. girls are good enough to take out for a 15-cent lunch, but it ends there. The young men at C. B. A. seem to think that we are a bunch of scare-crows. We wish they knew what we think of them.

* * *

Where do you get the idea that you're so good, anyway? You're not so far above that you can snub us and get away with it. Perhaps a little shock will wake you up to the fact that we've been nice about it too long.

"Just one other thing—you only mention the P. A. L. girls when you want to give the university a dirty dig, or when you feel it is your duty to do so. You boys seem to think you give us a break. A break! Are we laughing!

"You are the ones to get it, and we are willing to give it to you if you've got enough spunk to give us a reply to the invitation we've just handed out. Or is it that what we are talking about is over your heads?"

Well, C. B. A. boys, the challenge is on!

Heinie Manush Malady Hushed by Leaders

FAIR EXCHANGE: But was it? Heinie Manush, one of the greatest outfielders in baseball, who went over to the Red Sox camp this year, is ill and his ailment is said to be much more serious than Sox officials want it to be publicly known.

So far reports from the Sox training camp at Sarasota have been censored regarding Manush's true condition. Can it be that Yawkey bought a "lemon" in exchange for Roy Johnson, who always was and still is quite a ball player?

The Striped Horror

Melrose Highlands Woman Battles Animal in Kitchen

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

"My goodness," says MRS. GEORGIA CLOGSTON of 66 West Hill avenue, Melrose Highlands, "what awful things do happen in this world, and what narrow escapes we do have." And I have got to admit that Georgia speaks with all the authority of a woman of experience. For she too, has had her narrow escape. She too, has been face to face with disaster. She too, has lived through anguish—anguish that was not only mental and spiritual—but also nasal.

FLOYD GIBBONS

I call this story "The Striped Terror of the Back Stoop," and I know a lot of people are going to see that word 'striped" and think it's a tiger that Georgia had her adventure with. But I regret to say it was no tiger Georgia went up against that fateful September night back in 1920. A tiger, or anything else in stripes from a zebra to Al Capone, would have run like a rabbit from that nameless horror in black and white that Georgia suddenly came face to face with while she was peacefully going about her business, performing her duties on the family K. P. detail.

And I'll say this much for Georgia—she knows how to use her head. When her big moment came, it didn't find her wanting. She fought that Striped Horror with its own weapons. And it wasn't more than two seconds before she had the Horror on the run.

At the time this story opens—and that was more than fifteen years ago—Georgia Clogston's present home was just a summer camp. The land hadn't been cleared and the woods came right up almost to the back door. There was always a crowd of people around during the summer season, and they all pitched in to do the housework.

It was that housework that almost caused Georgia's downfall. There came an evening when it was her turn to empty the fine collection of potato peelings, coffee grounds, beet tops and what-not that had been thrown during the day into the iron pail under the kitchen sink. It wasn't such a pleasant job but it had to be done, so Georgia picked up the pail and started out the back door.

Supper had been late that night, and it was pitch dark outdoors. Georgia switched on the flashlight, went down the steps and along the board walk that led to the sunken [illegible] set in the ground, twenty or thirty feet from the house. She was almost to the end of the walk when suddenly she stopped. There, right in front of her was some sort of an animal.

It was about the size of a large tom-cat and at first that's what Georgia thought it was. She stooped down and threw the beam of her flashlight full on it. It wasn't a tom-cat! It was the Striped Terror.

It was a little animal with a pointed nose, a bushy tail, and a broad black streak down the middle of its back. It was the one and original "Fate Worse Than Halitosis." It was sure death to social ambition. In short, it was a skunk!

Georgia's body went cold all over. If that little beastie took it into his head to sprinkle his well known attar of roses around the neighborhood it would be the end—the end of Georgia's popularity for about six weeks.

Georgia doesn't know to this day why she didn't just get up and run for it. "But I didn't," she says, "instead, I straightened up slowly, keeping the flashlight shining full on the skunk's face, and began backing away up the walk. And believe it or not—the creature followed me!"

Whether the skunk was hypnotized by the bright light that shone in his eyes or just was sparring for an opening, Georgia doesn't know. I'm inclined to think he was hypnotized. Believe you me, boys and girls, a skunk doesn't HAVE to spar for an opening. But at the moment, Georgia wasn't stopping to figure out things like that. She was backing along the board walk that seemed at least ten miles long—her own eyes fixed in a terrified stare on the beady ones of the polecat.

The skunk followed her to the steps—and right up the steps. Georgia was standing with her back to the kitchen door. She couldn't retreat any farther without inviting old George J. Polecat right into the house. What to do? Georgia solved the problem by promptly becoming hysterical.

Then, without knowing it, she fought fire with fire—handed that skunk a dose of his own medicine. The can full of garbage that she had started out to empty was still clutched tightly in her hands, and she dumped it on top of the skunk. Then, with a shriek, she turned and ran into the house, slamming the kitchen door after her.

And Georgia didn't get inside a moment too soon, either. About one second later that skunk went into action, and for weeks thereafter the kitchen door was a dead loss. As a matter of fact there were people there who wouldn't even go in the KITCHEN.

But Georgia had won the battle. That was attested to, a few days later, by a tragic incident. A couple of trappers caught a skunk in a trap about half a mile away from Georgia's house, and sticking to his fur were the identical tea leaves, tomato skins, etc., that Georgia had thrown on it three nights before. The poor little skunk couldn't take it. Given a dose of its own medicine he had become despondent. The other little skunks would'nt play with him because he was all covered with garbage. So he stuck his head in a trap and committed suicide. At least that's the way Georgia figures it out.

Have you sent me that yarn of yours yet? Well, shoot it along.

Tomorrow we'll have another thrilling yarn. Watch for it!

New England Police Stories

GLOBE-TROTTER HUNT

As Told by Ace Crime Reporters

Belgian Tracked 5 Years Over World, Found in Canada

This is the 37th in a series of true detective stories from New England police annals being presented daily by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Other stories in the series will be written by reporters whose by-lines are equally familiar throughout New England.

By JAMES J. SMITH

It was Cyrille J. Vandenhecke's hard luck that prosaic, 20th century New England was the background of his life's drama and tragedy.

If his tangled loves—and the murderous passion they engendered—could only have had the advantage of a more remote, a more romantic setting, he might have come down to us in literary history as another Casanova, another D'Artagnan, another Benvenuto Cellini.

An unkind fate, however, decreed that Vandenhecke should prove his perilous proficiency as a home-breaker in an age tolerating neither the duelling rapier nor the poison draught as polite and legitimate means of disposing of a jealous husband.

Show-down for Vandenhecke in his game of heart-jugging came in Lawrence on August 9, 1918.

Love Is Born

He didn't choose to go to war. It happened, and the United States didn't draft him because he was well along into middle age—and because he had a wife and family.

But neither his years nor his parental responsibilities, as the record shows, discouraged stocky, graying Vandenhecke from putting his role of mill-town Lothario to the severest test.

According to her own confession later offered in court, the girl wife of another man began to find increasingly unexplainable the clearances of the silver Vandenhecke, who was employed with her in a weaving room.

On certain lodge nights, the unsuspecting husband in the case was unusually absent until a late hour.

Vandenhecke, on those evenings, saw to it that the young wife wasn't lonely.

Stolen love, however, failed to satisfy the Belgian Don Juan.

From his private files, which must have been ample, he withdrew enough money to finance him on a trip to Philadelphia.

There he engaged an apartment furnished it to his taste and soon happy in the company of his married sweetheart from Lawrence.

The ladies' husband, however, was not a man to accept with equanimity such an open flouting of his conjugal rights.

With one of his many pals he set along to reinforce him he followed his runaway wife to the Penn sylvania city.

What was said—or done, at the meeting is not now material as evidence, but back in Lawrence, together, went erring spouse, forgiving husband and their one-year-old son, whom the mother had taken with her to her rendezvous with her suitor.

Had Vandenhecke not been a psychological throwback to a century furnished by modern-day industrious he might have shrugged his shoulders philosophically, gone back to his own family and forgotten the incident.

But such wasn't his nature.

To the Lawrence home of his married ex-sweetheart he soon took himself, his face mounting as he reflected on the wrongfulness of a civilization which could foster true love with no trial a scrap of paper as a wedding certificate.

After 5 Years

It was what happened, at that meeting of two men and a woman, was never readily in doubt with Vandenhecke's murder guilt or innocence hanging in the balance.

When police arrived on such a certain the "forgiving" but erring husband was dead, with one bullet through his head and another through his throat.

The erring, and now repentant wife was in a condition close to that of having herself been charged for the fire of her restless admirer's weapon.

Whatever of the three may have been a victim of circumstances there seemed to be no doubt but that Vandenhecke had done the shooting.

Arrested the moment for police and state detectives was not to dispute the identity of the killer. Vandenhecke's guilt was established by the finest of scientific and not just the man.

But the trail they followed was a long, one.

It led back and forth across two oceans and three continents, fanning out, and five full years elapsed before the police of Boston, Lawrence and Ontario, Canada, could bring the fugitive slayer, expected to find him a cowering victim of guilty conscience and suspense, they were disappointed.

They found him a prosperous and respected member of a small industrial community, manager of the local mill, earning a comfortable salary—and the apparently loving and contented "husband" of a pretty young "wife" who had borne him two babies.

A hunted murderer? He didn't look it nor act it. He did not, however deny his identity.

His Story

His story, as he finally told it, was, in substance, as follows

He had gone to his married ex-sweetheart's Water street, Lawrence home, he said, not to confront her husband but to recover clothes of his and other valuables which she had taken, perhaps by accident, at the time of her hasty departure from Philadelphia.

Had the woman, alone, been at home, all might have gone smoothly, but her husband was present.

The first thing Vandenhecke knew, as he recalled the occasion, he and the wronged husband were scuffling on the floor.

Just what happened next, Vandenhecke "couldn't remember." He did know there was shooting. He denied he had had a gun. All was a blank in his mind for many days thereafter.

Back to normal he came at last and Vandenhecke. He found himself to his amazement, on an ocean liner approaching the shores of his native Belgium.

Returning memory, he admitted, acquainted him with the probability that letters were trouble brewing for him in Lawrence.

Even in Belgium, the long arm of the law was soon reaching for him, he said.

He was close to arrest when a cousin, one of his wife's birthplace informed him, in friendly fashion, that there were papers of some sort to be served upon him—and that those papers had originated in an unheard of and far distant community known as Lawrence, Massachusetts, in "America of the North."

Having sent a fraternal bottle of wine with the Belgian off cer, Vandenhecke suggested

"Let me have this process-serving business over with as soon as possible, my good fellow, that I may obtain from the gendarmerie the necessary documents, while I await you here, ordering, in the interval, another bottle of wine with which to greet you upon your return."

That sounded reasonable to the venerable constable. He went for papers. Vandenhecke caught a train.

From Belgium he said he went to Paris and from there to Marseilles.

Next he took it into his head to see Egypt and view the pyramids. Landing on the Nile, he was reminded of Cleopatra, heroine of a story he felt, must have had a long time advantages.

Writes to Police

In a retrospective mood, induced by the Egyptian surroundings, Vandenhecke, it appears, had, on hand, and addressed to the Lawrence police, a letter which he wrote and dispatched to that city forward.

The message which was brief was received by notice in Lawrence police that Vandenhecke, as soon as his affairs might permit, would be pleased to return and clear up any possible misapprehension concerning what had happened in the flat on Water street.

O'Brien may have ground his teeth at that audacity, but Egypt was a long way off.

By the time Anglo-Egyptian authorities could be notified, Vandenhecke had vanished. He was heard of somewhere in Africa but the trail, eventually, seemed to vanish in the air.

Vandenhecke's fatal mistake, as things developed, was made when he over-optimistically relinquished the comparative safety of foreign climes in order to come back, not to the United States, of course, but to Canada, a British dominion with domineering Anglo Saxon fondness for erecting a spade a shovel—and a eye killing a murder!

He may have been recognized in Rue Rivoli.

Or he may have been traced, at the last by some alleged correspondence with Lawrence friends or relatives.

State Detective Dick Griffin could tell you. But he probably won't.

He and City Marshal O'Brien—who still remembered that postcard from Egypt—went up to Renfrew and secured Vandenhecke back to Lawrence and to Massachusetts justice.

The prisoner's original wife, his only real wife, was still in Lawrence, she was white-haired now from toil and worry. She was five years older than when Vandenhecke had gone away.

So were the Vandenhecke children.

Not at first, but before Vandenhecke went eventually to the electric chair, all the members of his family gave him their forgiveness. They were active in the many moves which were made to commute the death sentence or obtain a new trial.

Also loyal to the alleged love-slayer as he fought for his life was his Canadian "wife," young, pretty and unsophisticated.

Although a mere witness at the trial she screened up railroad fare, came down, and followed her accused husband to Lawrence. There she obtained a position as domestic in a private household supported herself and her two babies and insisted she would remain in the future of her children come what may.

Only feminine heart which, at this time, seemed still hardened to the magnetic 50-year-old Belgian defendant was that of his former sweetheart, widowed by his alleged crime.

In the intervening five years she had married again, but she was the state's chief witness against Vandenhecke.

She admitted, in her testimony that she had succumbed to Vandenhecke's illicit wooing. She admitted that she had followed him to Philadelphia, abandoning her husband.

She only did so, however, because Vandenhecke had "threatened" her, so her story went

According to the erring wife's recollection of the day of the shooting, her first suspicion of trouble was when she heard the bang of a revolver.

She ran out to a hallway, she said, and there was Vandenhecke, gun in hand confronting her husband.

As she watched, she testified Vandenhecke fired. Her husband fell. Then Vandenhecke, so she said, bent over his prostrate victim and fired three times more.

Defies Killer

With two shots left in his gun Vandenhecke rose and faced her in a towering rage, the witness testified. He accused her of ensnaring his love, of returning willingly to her husband.

With her baby in her arms the wife defied the killer, she said

"Shoot me if you want to, but don't harm my son," she screamed, according to her story.

As Vandenhecke hesitated she turned and fled

Two bullets she said whizzed by her as she ran

These two bullets when the defense presented its case were the subject of inquiry by Vandenhecke's senior counsel, Attorney John P. Kane

Police witnesses were obliged to admit that the bullets were recovered

"Why aren't they here in this courtroom?" Kane then wanted to know

The officers not without visible embarrassment, admitted the bullets had been mislaid

Not available either was the single bullet which had been recovered from the murder victim's skull

More irritating still to the state was the fact that police had never found the murder weapon and couldn't even describe it with satisfactory detail

Neet they could do was produce several witnesses who testified to having seen Vandenhecke in possession a revolver which "might have been" the one which did the killing

To his own story of a tussle with the angry husband—a story at least inferring a possible plea of self defense Vandenhecke stuck unflinchingly

In his behalf was also introduced testimony that, when the wife of the shooting victim was first interviewed by police, she asserted— in the presence of her dead husband's body—that the case was one of "suicide"

She denied this statement

But it didn't matter, anyhow

The verdict was "guilty of murder in the first degree"

Vandenhecke's is calmly

He preferred the electric chair, he said, to life imprisonment. This was a good world. He had enjoyed it. He'd rather leave it, however than view it through iron bars

"If I cannot obtain a new trial," he said in a public statement, "and if the people of Massachusetts really think I am guilty of this crime, the chair is none too good for me.

"I would rather die at once than endure the long agony of life imprisonment. I have been in jail too long already."

One of Vandenhecke's last requests was that his body be turned over to some institution for scientific experiment.

"I'd prefer to be remembered," he said, "as the man who gave his life for science, rather than as the man who was executed as a murderer."

Nothing to save him from the extreme penalty were not only his two wives and their two families, but also Belgian-American organizations all over New England.

City Councilman James A. Watson of Boston, spokesman for opponents of capital punishment, attempted to make an issue of the Vandenhecke case, carrying an appeal direct to Governor Channing H. Cox.

Almost to the very last, Vandenhecke was firm in his refusal to ask anything short of a new trial. He didn't want "clemency." He wanted freedom—or death!

The latter was his portion!

New Trial Denied

Final denial of new trial hopes was contained in a Massachusetts Supreme Court decision, upholding the Lawrence jury verdict as justifiable in view of the evidence

The high court noted the failure of the state to produce murder bullets, also the testimony concerning the widow a alleged "suicide" statement

Other features, however, was "sufficient to warrant a finding of guilty," the court's decision said

Governor Cox refused all "mercy" pleas

And they found him on the swivel on Cyrille J. Vandenhecke, in the state prison death house in the early morning of July 30, 1921.

In a statement he was purported to have made to a Salvation Army officer, while he was awaiting execution, Vandenhecke allegedly referred to his young Canadian "wife" as his "true love," saying:

"This is the girl who is the real woman of my heart. She means more to me than anyone. My dream is to live with her in some quiet Canadian village.

"It may be only a dream, but it's a dream which means more to me than death, itself. Perhaps, in death, I shall realize it."

To this, the answer of the Canadian girl was

"I have no regrets that I met and loved Cyrille Vandenhecke. I am proud to be the mother of his children. Although I cannot be his wife, according to law, I feel that, in bringing him happiness and peace these last few years, I have done good rather than harm."

Wife No. 1 and "wife" No. 2 in the end, put aside their natural enmity and became, if not friends at least tolerant allies in the fight to save the man who had broken both their hearts.

They did not permit it to be used for scientific experiment.

It was cremated at Lawrence and the ashes buried in a Lawrence cemetery.

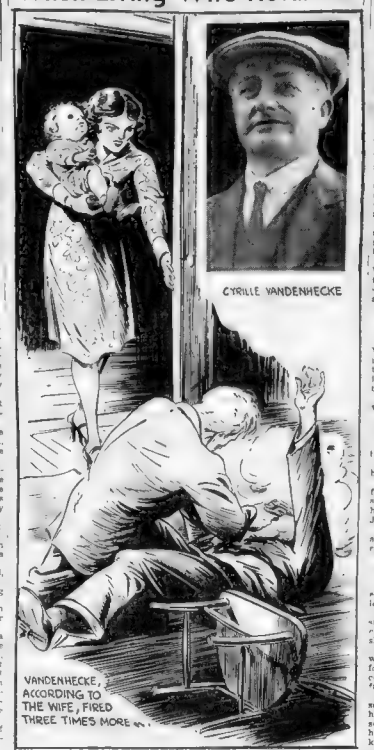
In another more romantic, more roguish century, he might have had stylish Cellini—to hand us down his blushing memoirs!

Tomorrow, in the Boston Evening American, the true detective series will be continued with "The Hermit's Diamond Murder Mystery," by Thomas F. Phelan.

When Erring Wife Returned



(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

The tangled loves of Cyrille J. Vandenhecke, Lawrence's Lothario, ended in tragedy, in 1918, when an erring wife returned to her forgiving husband. Vanderhecke, a Belgian by birth, followed her, and in a clash with her husband, killed him. Lawrence police tracked him all over the world, finally arresting him down in Canada. He paid the supreme penalty.

AUSTEN LAKE

Return of Peter Pan
Rabbit Maranville
On Sentimental Visit

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA., March 12—Eager to sniff again the beloved odors of his old training camp and to recapture the echo of his former life with the Braves,

AUSTEN LAKE.

Rabbit Maranville has returned to St. Petersburg and the West Coast Inn like a homesick urchin.

The hotel where the Braves once lounged on the wicker lobby chairs, the patio behind the factory-like parent building where the players lived lives of freemasonry, the sidewalk arcades where they sat the evenings out and listened to the hardening of their own arteries, were deserted.

The elderly tourist ladies had gone to bed with the sun. A night clerk lounged over the cigar counter and yawned. But Rabbit registered and went aloft through the murky hallways to listen for old ghosts.

There was no trace or twinge in the gimpy leg which had spelled his major league run, and he said in the same growly, buzz-saw voice, that he would play more than 100 games for Elmira this summer which he thought might just as well have been played for the Bees.

* * *

St. Pete Full of Rab's Old Pals

Out in the end of town was the hospital where he had lain for nearly three months suffering the agonies of having the fracture, set clumsily, rebroken again, and receiving bushels of mail from Boston sympathizers.

There was no mail waiting now as the Rabbit climbed the narrow stairs with Mrs. Maranville and a sleepy Negro porter trundled up with his bags.

The sulphurous odors of the fountain of youth, the malodorous spring which lies in the shrubbery across the road came to his nostrils and he sniffed the nauseous perfume with apparent relish.

In the morning he would fill his jugs and drink the bitter waters, which amount to a superstition with him, so that each March for many years he has swallowed large dosages of the stuff.

If there was any bitterness for real or imaginary slights from the present owners of the Boston Nationals, Rabbit refused to put it in language.

The chapter was closed, he said, and now it was vacation time in which, for several weeks, he would soak up the honey-colored sunshine on Pas-a-Grille's Beach, maybe watch a ball game or two, play a few rounds of golf with Babe Ruth. And then, when April came, he would go North to meet his Elmira players in upstate New York and start the hard scrabble conditioning work on the frosty ground of his adopted city.

He was collecting his lineup now and had several castoffs from Connie Mack, a couple from Brooklyn and, if Bill McKechnie wanted to be friendly, he might even take a few from the Bees.

St. Petersburg was full of his old friends. And so forth. But beneath his rooster-like jauntiness there was an undertone of wistfulness, like a small boy peeping from behind a gargoyle mask, and he showed a pathetic pleasure at being greeted so promptly by Boston writers.

It was nice to see all you guys again. He was going to hit Boston on the trip back. And he rolled up his pants legs to display the purple, spider-like scars where his old injury had healed, and did a little toe-jig to demonstrate his strength.

He was happier in the thought of playing ball, even if it was on the leaky-roof circuits of the minor leagues, than he would have been to be a coaching clown on the sidelines with the Bees.

* * *

May Barnstorm With Babe Ruth

RABBIT TOLD me that he was financially solvent, having at the moment a matured insurance trust for some $50,000 and income from bowling palace in Rochester. He didn't have to worry.

He wasn't touching the stuff and hadn't tasted high voltage drink since two years ago when, in a low moment he had trimmed his resolve in a brief fling that brought his baseball friends running like a regiment of house-dicks to save him from himself.

He had, he said, several promotional schemes to work out with Babe Ruth in which the two might collaborate profitably. Though what these were he refused to say.

An after-season bushwhacking tour? Well, maybe.

And when I mentioned it seemed odd that the two famous public chums and ex-patriots of baseball, Babe and himself, were banding together in the winter of their discontent, Rab said, pshaw, make no mistake, baseball owed the "Big Monkey" something, but for himself he wasn't begging "nobody for nothing."

Thin chirp of a night bird came through the blackness of the bedroom window, and presently Mrs. Maranville, stifling a yawn, said this could be continued tomorrow.

Rabbit loosened his tie and stood in the hallway, bouncing his guttural basso off the walls and waking the elderly invalid ladies.

And he invited us, with a coaxing air oddly like a pet puppy being put down the cellar stairs, to be sure to drop in tomorrow, early and often.

Home Runs in Any Ball Park, Those of Jimmy Foxx

JIMMY FOXX' four midweek clouts at Sarasota, Fla., would have been home runs in any ball park. At Fenway, the drives would easily have cleared the various barriers. The blows averaged 425 feet and were the longest ever made there. At Fenway Park one of the clouts cleared the wall and landed on a roof on the opposite side of Lansdowne street. A similar drive to the center of the left field wall would have dropped into the street. The longest distance at Fenway Park is deep center field, which is 168 feet, and Foxx's drive to center would have landed in the middle of the bleachers. The distance to left field at Fenway Park is 140 feet; right field is the same.

So, on the second rough game of the season today, Jimmie Foxx up had to bat. So, in the fifth inning of the game, Ted and Jack Kroner from Sta[illegible] at third base.

In fact, the experts, who were busily opining that the odds were 100 to 1 against the most promising youngster on the Red Sox roster proving superior to any of the flock of stars thereon, were unanimous in picking Graham and Kroner as the least likely to succeed.

Greatly Impressed With Graham

"Pete" Cramer is a great all around ball player. He can hit that apple with the best of them, is a great fly chaser, with a fine arm and is fast and heady on the paths.

He can't miss becoming a tremendous favorite with the Red Sox followers, for he's the master of all departments of the great national game.

Until he [illegible] arose, I had not seen enough of Graham to appreciate his speed. Boy, now he can burn up the ground.

I've been getting a great kick out of watching him circle the bases and have marveled at his speed and the ease with which he gets over the ground.

I guess he is one of the fastest players in camp, at present, but he has to bear down to outstep Mel Almada, "Pete" Cramer and Dusty Cooke.

Payne Field offers a fine opportunity to judge the ground covering ability of the Red Sox players. There's a vast expanse of territory between the infield and the fence, and everybody is getting plenty of

OLD HOP FAST ONE

Wilson Likes Him Best of All

FREQUENT WINNER IN WEST

By Dave Wilson

(Selections made for fast track)

BEST BET—OLD HOP, SIXTH RACE

Tropical Park, Fla., March 12—Old Hop, as he is placed in the one mile and a sixteenth of the sixth number, shapes up as the outstanding wagering hazard on a difficult card of seven races here this afternoon.

FIRST RACE

Creole Bird, Lady Genie, Relativity

CREOLE BIRD, fresh and well came from far out of the clouds to finish a fast running second to Miss Purvey in a sweltering drive at Hialeah over a few days ago. LADY GENIE pulled up an unlucky 4th in that event, but suited by all conditions in this affair. RELATIVITY for the remainder.

SECOND RACE

Fervid, Mixed Party, Ukraine

Just have to give FERVID one more chance. The Black colorbearer was heavily backed to drop better company at the other town, but failed. MIXED PARTY, fast and faint-hearted, figures to hold on long enough to save the purse from UKRAINE. The latter breezed eight panels in 1.42 in preparation.

THIRD RACE

Wise Bun, Lobe, Amhurst

WISE FUN displayed excellent speed in leading a shifty field of maidens down under the imaginary wire at Hialeah, but was disqualified for fouling. COBE, runnerup to Cosette, figures close up on the strength of that most recent endeavor. AMHURST shapes up well for the minor award.

FOURTH RACE

Sir Quest, The Hare, Back Log

SIR QUEST, running like a wild horse in training, needs only to run back to brilliant morning trials to win. The Odom colorbearer tapered off with an easy seven-furlong win in 1.27. The first-six furlongs were in 1.13. THE HARE, a vastly improved plater, figures close up on recent good efforts. BACK LOG for the remainder.

FIFTH RACE

Brandon Prince, Red Badge, Wild Turkey

String along with BRANDON PRINCE in this wide-open affair. The Waterman colorbearer is extremely partial to the Gables track and what's more never similar company at the other town. RED BADGE'S winning performance on opening day was a break considering that it was only four-fifths of a second off the track record held by Sahula. WILD TURKEY is dropping down.

SIXTH RACE

Old Hop, Galloping, Bombastic

OLD HOP, a product of Kentucky Western tracks, has had the benefit of a conditioner in better company and will be ready. The Tranquility colorbearer concluded training with an easy mile in 1.45. Contention will likely be furnished by GALLOPING. The latter turned in a fair effort on opening day. BOMBASTIC, a plodder, figures to be along in time to break into the picture.

SEVENTH RACE

Tight Wad, Top High, Celiba

TIGHT WAD showed a complete distaking for the Hialeah racing strip, and then efforts should be tossed into the discard. Previous good form entitles the Hamilton colorbearer to a standoff rating in an affair of this sort. TOP HIGH, fresh as a daisy, may prove dangerous if up to a good race. CELIBA is a keen possibility on recent form.

$400,000 Rockingham OFFER

Nashua, N. H., March 12 (AP)—The Nashua Telegraph says three New York financiers are negotiating to buy the controlling interest in Rockingham Park race track.

The three men the paper says, are James I. Bush, member of Hammons & Co., Inc., New York, and a director of Madison Square Garden Corporation; Thomas H. McKoy of Norton-McKoy, 61 Broadway, and C. E. Fauntleroy, private secretary to John Hay Whitney.

These men, the Telegraph says, have offered $400,000 for the controlling interest. The paper says Governor H. Styles Bridges asserted he understood negotiations were being made and that the deal probably would be completed by the end of this week.

Seeing Rabbit Maranville here reminds us that as a kid back in the spring of 1914, he was on his way out of the Braves' camp, and Lou Buss, a relative of the late George Stallings, was stricken with diphtheria. When the "Miracle Man" nephew had recovered, "Rab" was a fixture at shortstop.

Countless others among the game's greatest stars once were excess baggage that might have been lost in the shuffle if no emergency hadn't come to their rescue.

Will history repeat on the 1936 Red Sox?

Tod Yawkey has heard nothing from Bill Werber since wiring the flashy third backer to sign the original contract and hurry to camp.

Top Row, Azucar In $10,000 Stake

San Francisco, March 12—Top Row and Azucar, winners respectively of the 1936 and 1935 $100,000 added Santa Anita handicaps, will [illegible] bank Handicap over 1¼ miles at Tanforan April 11.

Azucar has also been named for the $5000 San Francisco Handicap next Saturday, a 1 1-16 mile feature.

Golden Miller Wins Gold Cup

Cheltenham, Eng., March 12 (AP)—Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller today won the Cheltenham Gold Cup steeplechase for the fifth time and retrieved his reputation which was besmirched when he refused a jump in a recent race.

H. Lloyd Thomas' Royal Mail was second and Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's American-owned Kellsboro Jack came in third, in a field of six starters. M. D. Blair's American-owned Fosquet fell during the three miles and two furlongs race.

JAMAICA Gets Electric EYE

1ST N. Y. TRACK TO MAKE MOVE

New York, March 12—The "electric eye," which takes accurate pictures of the finish of horse races, will be installed at Jamaica for its spring meeting, which opens on April 15 and runs through May 9.

In addition to installing the "electric eye" Empire will also have the electric result boards as well as the electric timer.

It will be the first time a New York track has used the "electric eye." Many modern scientific devices has been used in deciding the result of close finishes at Santa Anita in California and at Hialeah at Miami, Fla.

O'Hara in Line

Walter O'Hara's Narragansett Park at Pawtucket, R. I. recently announced it would use the "electric eye" during the coming racing season. O'Hara believes the "electric eye" will help him to keep Narragansett Park in its present position as the best money making race track in New England.

Jamaica—April 15 to May 9.
Belmont Park—May 11 to June 8.
Aqueduct—June 9 to July 2.
Empire City—July 3 to July 28.
Saratoga Springs—July 29 to August 29.
Aqueduct—August 31 to September 16.
Belmont Park—September 17 to October 3.
Jamaica—October 5 to October 17.
Empire City—October 19 to October 31.

WASHBURN Torpedoes COUNT

The gentleman had a comparatively easy time in taking the third and decisive fall after he had lost the second.

The Count appeared to have little stomach for Washburn's type of wrestling and folded quickly to lose the match after 4 minutes of wrestling in the third frame.

Huskies, Bates in Dual Meet

The long dual meet for the Northeastern trackers scheduled indoors will be held at Lewiston, Me., Saturday afternoon with the snappy Bates outfit as the opposition.

Captain Jimmy Sandler, who made a disappointing showing at the I. C. 4-A meet last week, hopes to make up for it by bettering his six foot four and a quarter inch [illegible] made at Bates in '35. Sandler will also run in the dash.

Ray Henderson and Alan Hakanson will double in the hurdles and sprints. Chas Garland and Bob Birchall are slated for the 600 run. Bill Chaffey, Greg Hilton, Ted Secor and George Leck running in the 1000. The longer distances will be taken care of by Al Lengel and Art Johnston.

Rod Whittier and Bob Betts are entered in the pole vault. The weight events will be taken care of by Charley Canner, Ray Laine, Jim Colligen and Sam Wolowicz.

SAM SMITH SUPERSTITIOUS SOUL

ANENT HIS Y. M. H. A. FIVE !

By Murray Kramer

Sam is the athletic director at the Y. M. H. A., and his pet hobby is the house basketball team. He has Johnny Fox do the coaching, but Sam makes up the schedules and takes care of the business end.

Now, Sam will never admit that the Basketball Game is [illegible] as he is concerned is a victory over the West End House in basketball, but the case is true nevertheless.

Next Sunday a game plays the West End House a return game at Mechanics Building. In the first meeting between the two, the "Y" wasn't conceded a chance to win, but the experts were wrong. The Y. M. H. A. slapped a very distasteful loss right down the gullets of several hundred W. E. rooters.

But my friends in cross you are still wondering where Sam Smith's superstition comes in, we may as well go into that phase of the yarn right now.

Sam figured that a warmup game before the West End House clash back last January would be okay. He, therefore, scheduled the Everett Y. M. H. A. for a breather the night before.

Those insubordinates from Everett disliked the patronizing view of the Y M H. A. and up and beat that Boston crowd. This victory over Sam's boys was fun, the Solo Red and Black needed.

It made the West End House as cocky as the "Y" had been the night before, and history was repeated. The lowly Y. M. H. A. rose and smote the West End House.

Sam, because of this past victory, wants a repeat Sunday. He is trying to carry out the very same plan and hopes for the same results.

As a result his boys play the Everett Y. M. H. A. home Saturday night. Deep down, Sam is even hoping that his boys get beaten again so that it will put them in the right frame of mind for Sunday.

And that brings about your correspondent's view that Sam is superstitious. Sam will very probably [illegible] and may come strong down to 3 Wintrop square late today looking for a scalp.

But the above is your story and if we are stuck with it,—so what!

172 RACING Days for EMPIRE STATE

By Associated Press

The New York State Racing Commission has approved 172 days of the thoroughbred sport for the Empire State this year. The season is two days longer than last year, will open at Jamaica April 15 and closes at Empire City October 31.

The only change from last year is that Belmont Park will hold its fall meeting the last two weeks in September and the first two in October. Jamaica will hold forth during the latter session.

John Hay Whitney, member of the New York State Racing Commission has sailed Saturday for England to see his horses run in the Grand National at Aintree, March 27.

Whitney has three entries—Double Crossed, Red and Gun and Royal Ransom — in the steeplechase classic and plans to start all of them. While there Whitney will also attempt to interest French and English sportsmen in the proposition of international races to be held in rotation here and in England and France.

Jockey Sammy Renick, whose contract with Alfred G. Vanderbilt takes effect March 16, will leave Miami, Fla., for Baltimore the first of next week. Renick will have the job of helping prepare Vanderbilt's large string for the races. Heading the stable are Discovery, Airflame, the speedy two-year-old, and the Kentucky Derby candidates—Winter Sport and Postage Due.

Discovery Prepped for Big Money

Baltimore, March 12 (AP)—Spurred on rather than deterred by his reverse at Santa Anita, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery is being put in trim for another campaign for "big money."

The five-year-old chestnut son of Display is now at his master's Sagamore farms. A suggestion of [illegible] was of his failure to finish in the money in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, where he was favorite, brought an emphatic reaction from Trainer J. H. (Bud) Stotler.

"Not yet," Stotler said. "That horse has plenty of racing left in him. He will win $100,000 this year yet. You don't retire them when they still have that left in them."

Other than to say the 1935 handicap champion would be ready when the season opened at the New York tracks, Stotler has no definite plans for Discovery.

"As soon as he freshens up, we will put him back in competition," Stotler said. "There will be plenty of races he can run in."

Evelyn Chandler To Skate Here

Miss Chandler is the highest paid woman skater of the world. She has received $1000 for a three-minute exhibition, which would make her tops in her profession.

Miss Chandler's number will be the highlight of an all-star program. The costuming and elaborate staging make the charity fete the most colorful sports event of the year.

RAJAH USES TWO BATTING CAGES

By the Associated Press

Clearwater, Fla.—Jim Bucher, the former second baseman, may hold down third base for the Dodgers this season instead of the holdout, Joe Stripp, Freddy Lindstrom or rookie Frank Skaff.

A heavy hitter despite his lack of weight, Bucher also did some flashy third basing in yesterday's practice game.

Pensacola, Fla.—Dick Bartell, who claims his hitting slump last year was the result of trying to use a set of bats that didn't follow the proper specifications appears to be proving his point. In the Giants' intra-camp game yesterday he smacked a double and two singles and drew a pass his other time up.

San Antonio, Tex.—If practice makes perfect, young Bud Hafey, Chick's nephew, should have a big season with the Pirates. He spent the whole winter playing in exhibition games and keeping in condition and now is getting plenty of attention from Manager Pie Traynor.

St Petersburg, Fla.—Pat Malone, Yankee scrub, is making a great effort this Spring to repay Manager Joe McCarthy for carrying him through last season. He relieves the mound every time he gets a chance, runs around the park, does individual pitching up exercises and takes part in pepper games like pitching this Spring has reflected the extra effort to get into condition.

Orlando, Fla.—Clark Griffith, Washington owner, is especially pleased this Spring with Cecil Travis' showing in the infield. "He's got one of those steel arms like Joe Cronin's," said Griffith. "Buddy Myer also looked good, especially at running down runners."

Lakeland, Fla.—The world champion Detroit Tigers have been given an extra incentive to repeat in the American League this year with the offer of Owner Walter O. Briggs of a bonus—one of the biggest ever paid a baseball club—for a pennant. Observers believe the bonus plan was inaugurated to coax Hank Greenberg into the salary fold and to solve later salary problems.

New Orleans—Suffering from rainy weather, the Indians hoped to get in one long workout today before going to Pensacola, Fla., for a series with the Giants. Manager Steve O'Neil, kept in the stands by an injured knee, sent his team through a two-hour drill yesterday but a downpour made further work impossible.

St Petersburg, Fla.—Bob Quinn president of the Boston Reds, admits he would like to buy the Dean brothers, but he doesn't want to "be guilty of making an offer to buy both at bait plan rates." For that reason he won't visit Bradenton to discuss the situation. "But," he adds, "just let them as much as whisper that either Dean or both are for sale."

Fort Myers, Fla.—Connie Mack liked the work of Bill Dietrich against the St. Louis Cards in a Grapefruit League game yesterday. Dietrich held the Cards hitless in four innings, only 12 batsmen facing him. Bob Johnson and George Puccinelly were hot at bat.

Avalon, Cal.—Manager Charlie Grimm announced today he will divide the Cub squad into two sections for the long exhibition schedule, with the "first team" taking only the customary pre-game batting and fielding workout. Longer sessions afield face the rest.

West Palm Beach, Fla.—Roger Hornsby, having installed another batting cage, let it be known hitters need not fear they will be overlooked and veterans will have no excuse for failing to get in plenty of practice.

Bradenton, Fla.—The Cardinals planned only routine practice today in preparation for their exhibition game with the Phillies tomorrow. They took the Athletics into camp 9 to 8 yesterday despite being held hitless for four frames.

Poisoning of Golden Fancy

Halifax, N. S., March 12 (AP)—Police pressed an investigation today into death, believed from poison, of Golden Fancy, only registered five-gaited saddle horse in the Maritime Provinces. Her owner, Dr. K. H. Mahaffy, estimated the horse was worth $6000. The horse died last night.

Contents of the animal's stomach would be analyzed, authorities said. Golden Fancy won the red ribbon at Worcester, Mass., last year and was being groomed for the national horse show at New York and the Toronto exhibition.

Mr. Boston Lutze Fast, Strong To 200

By Jack Conway

NICK LUTZE will carry 200 pounds into the ring when he gets his shot at Danno O'Mahony's $10,000 diamond studded championship belt at the Garden tomorrow night. This means the spectacular Californian will have an excellent chance to win.

Lutze has been mixing it up with the best wrestlers in the world since he first became a Boston sensation in a bout with Pat McGill at the Arena. His double arm lock and reverse body hold have stamped him as the owner of a bear of the fellows. Lutze would have been champion before now if he had been able to keep his weight on. Nick could hold up at 200 pounds all the time he got to the final of a series of tournaments but he would be around 242 pounds. At a low weight he would not have a chance to conquer the champ.

Mr. Boston

This is why Lutze has been taking things easy for the past three weeks. He has built up his weight for the O'Mahony tussle. At 200 pounds he will have all of his strength and speed when he faces the Irishman. He contends he is a better grappler than Danno, and that he will have the margin from the start of the bout.

O'Mahony has decided to give Lutze a chance to get his championship belt. He has agreed to meet Nick in the ring at the Garden next O'Mahony's belt was not at stake when he went to Milwaukee to wrestle Ed Don George in New York in view of the fact that it was an exhibition and not a championship contest.

REFEREE

IN VIEW of the controversy following some of the tussles of Referee Ted Tonneman, the referee for tomorrow night's Mahony-Lutze bout, Referee Paul Ruffalo will be very careful whom he names as third man in the ring during the title skirmish.

Lutze is entitled to a fair deal. If he is able to pin the Irishman to the canvas for three seconds, he should be awarded the duke.

I do not believe even O'Mahony's staunchest supporters would care to see him given any edges over the colorful Lutze.

Billy Disick, who is in the midst of a comeback campaign, will meet Mickey Cox, an opponent in the semi-final. Tuesday night, Dan Hart will wrestle Wild Bill Longson, Jack Pateros, Jr., will meet Al Brown and Chief Black Elk Blue Feather.

ROBERT

LYON Robert is back to get the scalp of the Pepsi-Cola Ace and incidentally make wrestling history. Robert defeated Dean Detton in one of the most unusual events ever staged in the Arena and drew a crowd of 8,000 to the ringside.

Robert is now in New York and will appear in the Garden next Monday night when he collides with Lou Daro, a show to be staged by Jack Curley.

Robert says he will try to get O'Mahony on the spot in New York. You will find the New York State Commission to insist that Lutze and Dan settle their championship match.

The New York Athletic Commission is standing with O'Mahony as champion. It says the Irishman will be recognized as title holder until such time as he is upset in a championship meeting.

Meanwhile Robert intends to keep on going and comers. He believes he can put up a long string of victories he will gain recognition as champion.

RANDOM SHOTS

JACK Sharkey is back in the ring training . . . It is likely that Max Baer will be signed to meet Tony Galento at the Garden, and Phil Scott, promoter in San Francisco, and Sharkey we can only 208 pounds after his recent layoff and will be over 200 pounds when he steps into action again . . . Ed Don George has delayed his proposed trip to this city for a bout with Henry Piza because of the critical illness of the latter's mother at her home in North Java, N. Y. . . . Lou Daro is going to his mother is one of the reasons he has not called Dan Cupid's darts . . . Joe Cronin has everybody know he will start negotiations for the Red Sox this week . . . He doesn't intend to give away to Eric McNair or to anybody else. McNair and Bill Werber, provided the latter comes to terms with Tom Yawkey, will battle it out for the right to have Cronin third baseman. In the event Cronin should meet with an injury, McNair will be shifted to short and Werber will play third base.

HOOVER RADIO TALK ON AIR TONIGHT

By N. F. T.

Now is the time for all good listeners to tune in and hear what opposing political orators have to say.

Tonight Chairman Herbert Hoover will broadcast a speech prepared by Republican leaders. It will be sent out over the air over WBZ-WBZA and a network of 9[illegible] stations.

It is understood that Mr. Hoover will not make personal attacks on President Roosevelt, although he may make some caustic comments, as he is known to be worth his weight in wisecracks when he gets started.

Then to-morrow comes the vigorous voice of Senator Robinson, the Arkansas advocate of the Democratic party. He's due to have his say on WABC-Columbia at the same time as the G. O. P. talk. His topic is entitled "Propagating and Policy Balancing" and will originate from the studios of WJSV in Washington. Former President Hoover holds forth at the insurance banquet in New York.

HUB HIGHLIGHT

Over and methinks somewhere above the foregoing, there comes the local program (WNAC of music and merrymaking, which extends the gala I. J. Fox [illegible] Spring opening ball [illegible] so says he, this evening at 5:30 p.m. It promises stage star personalities, music by Bakey and a general all-around attraction quite out of the ordinary. Linus Travers will direct it all in his very best master of ceremonies manner.

Like the impetuous young Irishman that he is, Terry O'Toole, popular young major-domo of the popular "Irish Echoes" program, just can't wait for St. Patrick's day to get here. One reason shouldn't have him in view of the program he has in store for us into Ireland in commemoration of that great patron saint of Ireland. This spirited pre-celebration of St. Patrick's day takes place on the air (WAAB) tonight, from 7:15 to 7:45 p.m.

Who's Who in Radio

10 a. m.-4 a. m. Seth's Day!

Importance of sound effects is revealed in the tenth of a series of articles on radio stars, describing the career of Phillips Lord, creator of Seth Parker.

By DOROTHY ROE

(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

New York, March 12—Leading contender for the title of "busiest man in the world" is Phillips Lord, who writes, produces, directs and acts in three of the leading programs of the air.

Seth Parker

The Seth Parker of Sunday night's Sing'n School fame is the same Phillips Lord who is the genius behind the "Gang Busters" broadcasts on Wednesday nights—all those realistic police broadcasts.

And because he sees no point in wasting an hour out of every 24 in sleep, he is about to take on another program to occupy his time two mornings a week.

• • •

The versatile Lord was catapulted to radio fame right soon after he left college. He was a junior when, incensed at a professor of Maine history, he headed a revolt in one of the early fraternities to be created. Seth Parker, the psalm-singing sage of New Ipswich, was born.

When he reached the studio with his troupe he was told that a scheduled program had failed to appear and he asked to pinch hit for the air.

The act went on the air without a rehearsal and has been there ever since.

• • •

This, for instance, is a rough idea of the method of preparation for thirty minutes on the air with "Gang Busters."

After the broadcast on Wednesday night, Lord invites to the Park Vista hotel a group of engineers and writers from 10 p.m. until 4 a.m. preparing the first draught of next week's script. During that time he spends several hours on the long-distance telephone, talking to police chiefs all over the country from San Antonio to San Francisco, gathering data and clues on actual crimes.

On Friday he drives the boys from 9:30 to 12:30 to his estate in Jaffrey and holds the first rehearsal of the Gang Busters at the Colonial studio from 12:45 to 4 p.m. Then he returns to his apartment and revises the script once more until 4 a.m.

Saturdays and Sundays are spent chiefly on "Seth Parker" and the cigarette hour, and on Monday the "Gang Busters" is rehearsed from 2 to 5 p.m.

A phonograph record is made of the rehearsal and Lord takes it home with him where during the evening he listens to it to the point where he knows, deciding what is wrong.

After he has made his notes on changes he will make, he goes to the studio and the cycle begins again on Tuesday after noon.

On Wednesday, after the fourth rewriting of the script the Gang Busters' cast rehearses for twelve hours, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., when the act goes on the air.

He spends at least twenty hours in the writing of each script, and as much as in his efforts to secure correct sound effects.

• • •

The technician was baffled but Lord said a cry.

Lord recently completed a tour around the world in the interest of the expedition. He [illegible] he was accompanied by [illegible] and two small daughters, Jessica and Patricia.

(Jessica Dragonette will be the topic of the last of these articles on radio stars.)

BONIGLI Out of American TOURNEY

By Ed Cogswell

"Get away in front and stick there just as long as you can," were the instructions Bill (Pegleg) Daly gave his jockeys when riding thoroughbreds in sprint races.

The same slogan applies to the entrants in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Grand Candlepin Bowling Tournament at the 20th Century Club, Boston, March 30-April 11.

The early starters will be facing the foul line with the objective of scoring as high total for 3 strings as they have plenty of time in topping them.

That the early bird has been successful in this respect is the record in 90 per cent of the past 12 tournaments . . . the marks set up in the initial week having survived the test of later competition.

He certainly is. No barred. However, in the double and team events [illegible] one of owner or employee is permitted to take part in a double or team class (Champion Bonigli of Lynn, Mass., though, that he won't enter the tournament for several reasons. One is that a heavy cold has settled in his right arm and shoulder, making it painful to roll a ball.

Another reason he gives is that [illegible] his alleys in Coolidge Corner, Fields Corner and in Norwood believe it wouldn't be fair to them were he to compete.

[illegible] who ANY bowler should be afraid of [illegible] in a three-string contest is a possible. The fact that he won his title it will be remembered his opening string was less than 100, but the event was for ten strings. Allowing him to make up for the poor start in those strings, Bonigli, with only a 10-pin start would have been off high and dry.

Thing this over, bowlers remembering also that in all of the big tournaments the standard is three strings for the event, equalizing the chances of all entrants in waging each Hap. TERRIERS SHY OF MOUND TALENT

COLLARD OPTIMISTIC, HOWEVER

To-morrow begins the opening series in New England college baseball squads and prospects. These are crucial periods . . . Support in these games does . . .

By Will Connell

A coach's solo without a plaintive note is heard these days at Boston University as Mel Collard takes over the varsity baseball teaching.

It isn't that the Terriers have any diamond advantages, and not that he thinks he has a great team in the making.

"I have hopes for this team," says Collard, "because New England college baseball material is the best in the country, as far as I've observed.

"In the midwest, where I coached for eight years, there are many schools that have restricted baseball programs, and others that have no baseball.

"The boys aren't developed in such large numbers as hereabouts. Even though our material isn't the best in the world, it is good enough to be moulded into a real team if not this year then next."

Collard coached Central Wesleyan and Ozark Wesleyan both Missouri colleges for two and a half years respectively. A year ago he came East, took over B. U. freshman baseball and this year moved up to varsity chief, ink in the same spot.

Mr. Fixit Asked to Offer Clothes

By MR. FIXIT

Boston Evening American Public Service Department

This department has been instituted as a public service for Boston Evening American readers. It will endeavor to solve problems and [illegible] troubles dealing with city, state or public utility service. Request must be specific and brief. No anonymous requests nor matters of a purely private matter can be considered.

Before Mr. Fixit takes up his usual problems, he wants to print a request of Mrs. Barnes of 165 Massachusetts avenue. Mrs Barnes has a great deal of clothing that would fit a boy around four years of age. She has asked Mr. Fixit, through the medium of this column, to ask anyone who can use clothing of this kind to communicate with her. The clothing consists of suits, sweaters and shoes. Her phone number is Commonwealth 9648.

Mr. Fixit received the following letter from Mrs. M. T. G. of Rockford street, Roxbury:

"In back of my house the garbage hasn't been removed for over three weeks. I have only lived here but a few weeks and I don't understand what trouble is. I would greatly appreciate it if you could do something about it."

Mrs. M. T. G. can rest assured that the matter will be taken care of very soon. Already Mr. Fixit has been informed that an inspector of the Public Works Department of the City of Boston has been assigned to this particular complaint and satisfactory results can be expected.

In answer to the letter of Mrs. James E. Hawkins of 8 Blackwood street, Mr. Fixit has already seen to it that the City of Boston sewer department has an inspector investigate her complaint.

Mr. Hawkins wrote concerning the water in an alley near her home. She says:

"On this street at the entrance to an alley coming toward my house is a terrible condition. Water is half-way to the knees, some of the time. Could you help, for it should be fixed."

LEWIS HANEY ON TREND

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, March 12—A number of inquiries suggest that many people are wondering why there are so many unsound schemes afoot these days. Can economists be right in pointing out the errors which so many others accept?

All this is just the usual condition in such great post-war depressions as we have been going through. Conditions now are much as they were after the Napoleonic wars, over a hundred years ago. Not a single new scheme has been proposed.

Few people are in a position to understand the causes of the trouble. Those who are, propose such drastic remedies that most people refuse to listen to them. It seems more pleasant to follow the quacks, and to try one patent medicine after another.

* * *

Our troubles arise largely from certain human characteristics. First, there is the tendency of poor people to have big families. So population multiplies, supplying plenty of cheap cannon fodder. Second, proud and greedy emperors, Dukes and Fuehrers use these droves of humans to gain more power and territory.

So wars come. (Most of our present ills trace back to the World War.)

But war means not only anguish, but enormous waste. War always means a piling up of huge public debts for unproductive purposes. War can't "pay," so it borrows and leaves debt.

The inevitable result is always inflation. Wars are run on credit. The savings of the people are "borrowed" and turned into smoke and gas. What is left is paper—either government notes (greenbacks) or bank "deposits" based on government borrowing (bonds), or both. As credit is expanded, it becomes strained, going beyond probable repayment. And the "currency" based upon such credit declines in purchasing power. Frequently the gold standard has to be abandoned.

* * *

So prices rise. Look at the price curve for 1912-1915, 1861-1865, and 1914-1920. These great price mountings may be partly due to shortage of goods caused by the wastage of war, but chiefly they arise from the depreciation of the currency, and represent inflation.

The inflationary rise in prices leads to a speculative boom. People overspend. This brings overproduction and overdevelopment of real estate. People imagine they are in a new era.

Finally, and inevitably, all these excesses, which are built upon papers, have to be corrected. Deflation follows the inflation. Prices fall, as the paper currency is forced back to a sounder basis. Thus the economic crime of war is atoned for.

Then the quack remedies appear. Those who have any real wealth or savings are attacked, and a "redistribution" is proposed. New schemes for borrowing, the government being used to make forced loans, are brought forth. Those who borrow in the new era now refuse to pay. Means of repudiation are sought on all hands.

* * *

Some of the quacks say that what we need is more spending, and for that purpose they would print more notes and call them "money."

These quacks are joined by others who say there is too much saving, and would force people to spend their savings by taxing them or depreciating the value of the dollars they have saved.

Still other quacks brazenly propose inflation (perhaps calling it reflation). They say that we were happy when we were drunk on inflation, so let's have another drink!

Others say: Look at all our troubles. They came while we had private initiative, competition, and a constitutional form of republican government. Therefore, let us destroy the "older order," and set up some scheme of "social planning." Let the politicians run business.

And so on down the dreary line of Utopias and quack remedies. We are in great trouble, and, not knowing the cause, we are willing to try any economic rejuvenator or hair restorer that is offered for sale. The economic medicine men thrive!

The plain fact is that now, as in 1825 and 1875, the only real recovery lies in kicking out the quack doctors and taking our medicine. The chief remedies are a balanced budget so that we can have real money, the profits motive—that we can have real employment, and fair competition—so that economic values can control.

TAX ON Surpluses Is STUDIED MANY CHANGES FORECAST

New York, March 12—In a special analysis of possible results of adoption of the administration's plans for taxing corporate surpluses, the Standard Statistics Company, of New York, draws the following conclusions:

"Analysis of the earnings and dividend positions of some 200 leading corporations that have already reported their 1935 results provides the basis for certain tentative conclusions with respect to the probable results of the enactment of a measure along the lines proposed.

"The service finds that substitution of a tax on the difference between net income before federal taxes and the amount of dividend payments would:

1—Encourage companies which have been paying out less than about 62-65 per cent of net incomes (as currently calculated) to increase disbursements as an alternative to bearing a heavier tax burden.

2—Reduce the tax burden of corporations now paying out 65 per cent or more of net incomes as dividends, but still tempt such companies to adopt even more generous policies.

3—Influence companies which are now paying dividends out of surplus to reduce payments if, under the new basis of calculating net income, they still constitute more than normal earnings.

5—Tend to hasten the payment of preferred dividend accumulations and of non-cumulative preferred dividends.

Until the House sub-committee has had an opportunity to examine all angles of this problem it would be dangerous, however, to draw any hard and fast conclusions along the lines just outlined.

It would seem reasonable to expect that some consideration will be given to the problem of the small and weak corporations and those with heavy capital requirements, all of which would be adversely affected as compared with the strong corporations, which might actually find their taxes reduced.

GAIN IN Building PERMITS EXCEEDS YEAR AGO

The value of building permits issued in February continued to show a large percentage gain over the like month of 1935, but fell slightly below the level of the preceding month.

Usually a slight increase is recorded from January to February.

Returns from 215 cities of the United States, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., involved a total estimated expenditure for new buildings, additions, alterations and repairs during February amounting to $51,406,138, compared with $54,957,904 in January, a decline of 6.5 per cent.

When compared with the $27,636,387 figure recorded in February a year ago, however, last month's permit total showed a gain of 86.0 per cent.

Groups:	February, 1936	February, 1935	Change P.C.
New England	$2,106,139	$1,803,537	+ 16.8
Mid. Atlantic	12,805,872	7,641,054	+ 67.6
South Atlantic	7,182,218	4,049,201	+ 77.4
East Central	12,228,937	5,227,585	+ 133.9
South Central	12,013,903	2,623,630	+ 358.0
West Central	2,464,544	1,189,122	+ 108.8
Mountain	1,077,307	399,723	+ 82.6
Pacific	2,946,208	4,513,208	+ 48.1
Total U. S.	$51,406,138	$27,636,387	+ 86.0
N. Y. City	$10,582,514	$5,852,998	+ 80.8
Dist. of Col.	$2,324,821	$21,783,459	+ 87.4

The bulk of the decline shown in February from January occurred in the Middle Atlantic and East Central areas of states, with the New England section showing only a small decrease.

The 39 other groups all contributed increases, ranging from 0.6 per cent in the Mountain group to 58.6 per cent in the South Central division. Comparison between February this year and last, revealed large gains in all sections of the country.

The aggregate permit value for the first two months of 1936 was almost double the total for last year's period. February this year amount recorded in the first two months of 1933, when the low point in building was reached.

The combined value of building permits in the 215 cities for January and February this year amounted to $106,364,042, against $54,462,858 in the first two months of 1935 and only $34,006,748 in the same period of 1933. All sections reported heavy increases over last year.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, March 12—Wall street's only known explanation for the sudden spectacular rise of more than 30 points in Amerada Corp. in less than a week has been official reports of new oil discoveries on portions of the company's properties.

The company has a half interest in 60,000 acres in Frio County, Texas, where wells have recently come in at extreme angles of the development.

The discovery is regarded as having proven an area five miles long. One of the principal beneficiaries of the advance in the price of the stock is Newmont Mining, which last year purchased a substantial stock interest in the company. Newmont carried these holdings in the 1935 year-end investment portfolio at 30,400 shares at a market value of $2,413,000, averaging slightly above $70 a share. Amerada was yesterday quoted 50 points above this figure.

National Dairy Tops Borden Share Income

Brokerage firms have noted some switching out of Borden into National Dairy Products since both organizations published their annual reports for 1935. The statements disclosed that for the first time in their corporate histories National Dairy net per share last year exceeded that of its competitor. Borden earned $1.10 a share with dividend requirements of $1.60 a share and National Dairy reported $1.38 a share for the $1.20 a share annual common dividend.

London Rates on N. Y. Stock Calls Holding

The latest list of rates quoted by London put and call writers on New York stocks shows practically no change as a result of the recent political developments abroad. Ninety-day options on 30 to stock of record March 20, about a dozen favorite issues in this market, quoted at approximately current prices for 100 shares, includes Atchison, $725; Bethlehem Steel, $525; Chrysler, $800; Consolidated Oil, $237.50; Distillers Seagrams, $425; Illinois Central, $225; New York Central, $425; Northern Pacific, $425; Southern Pacific, $425; U. S. Steel, $537.50 and Western Union, $700. Puts for 90 days, London terms and delivery, are as follows: Chrysler, $750; New York Central, $425; Northern Pacific, $425; Southern Pacific, $412.50 and U. S. Steel, $550.

Taxes, Reserves And Dividends

Larger spending power through increased dividend disbursements under the proposed undistributed profits tax must be short-lived, according to the view expressed yesterday in the Street. If the final bill permits no exemptions for the building of "depression reserves," it was pointed out, the taxation must in the long run be bearish on corporation dividends. The average corporation, it was remarked, must feed constrained, in the proper interests of its stockholders, to make such reserve charges even though they be so heavily taxed. The "half loaf" which taxes would leave would soon become none, without reserves. For example, if $100,000 is a proper allocation to surplus reserves, then it will be necessary with a 33 1-3 per cent tax to increase the charge against earnings to $150,000 in order to retain the same amount for reserves.

Dividend

Incorporated Investors declared regular semi-annual dividend of 2½ per cent in stock, payable April 30 to stock of record March 20.

KEYNES' Theory VIEWED DOCTRINE OF SPENDING

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

New York, March 12—John Maynard Keynes, British economist and business executive, has been a non-resident member of President Roosevelt's "brain trust."

Few theories have influenced President Roosevelt's thinking as much as Mr. Keynes, who is perhaps the intellectual father of the doctrine of spending your way out of depressions.

In view of Mr. Keynes' position in the kitchen cabinet, the publication today of his latest whack at orthodox economists is of more than routine interest. If allowance is made for the time lag between theory and practice, Mr. Keynes' newest book, entitled "The General Theory of Employment, Interest and Money," may be expected to lay the premises for a still newer New Deal a decade or two hence.

Mr. Keynes' book deals more with abstract ideas than with concrete policies. In the circumstances it contains much of what the governor of Kansas recently characterized as "fuzzy thinking."

If Mr. Keynes' thesis can be boiled down to a paragraph or two, his message apparently is that an automatic or "natural" solution of groping for full employment is impossible.

In the circumstances, like the Socialists, Mr. Keynes would enlarge the sphere of activity of the government. He would centralize the function of investment—the problem of adding to our reservoir of capital equipment. But, unlike the Socialists, he would give a broad sway to private initiative in determining what particular lines of activity should go to make up the total volume of all production.

Eventually, Mr. Keynes would replace the individual investor. He says:

"Experience suggests that in existing conditions saving by institutions and through sinking funds is more than adequate."

Mr. Keynes evidently thinks that the time has passed for stimulating saving through a high rate of interest.

He thinks it much more important to encourage the flow of available capital by borrowing from business men through the bait of a low rate of interest.

The thought is that at a 2 per cent interest rate, for example, it is economically sound to carry on new projects which would be wrecked by a 6 per cent rate.

Mr. Keynes holds out this new goal:

"Thus we might aim in practice at an increase in the volume of capital until it ceases to be scarce, so that the functionless investor will no longer receive a bonus; and at a scheme of direct taxation which allows to the intelligence and determination and executive skill of the financier and entrepreneur, etc., all the reward which can be attributed to their work."

We certainly so fond of their craft that their labor could be obtained much cheaper than at present) to be harnessed to the service of the community on reasonable terms of reward."

WITH U. S. Exports Show Gain

This chart shows the total exports to and imports from Brazil during the period 1929-35.

From a statistical standpoint the past year showed a slight improvement in our exports over 1934 and a small decline in imports during the same period.

South American suspicion of Yankee imperialism has not helped our trade relationships with these countries, but the United States through reciprocal trade agreements and diplomatic gestures, is trying to restore a better feeling.

The reciprocal trade treaty was signed in Washington, February 2, 1935. This treaty calls for the continuance of coffee on the free list and reduction in duties on manganese ores, Brazil nuts and cotton beans. Brazil grants reduction on American industrial and agricultural exports in 67 tariff classifications and agrees not to raise duty rates on 30 others. The reductions range from 20 to 60 per cent.

It is estimated that Brazil takes 25 to 30 per cent of her imports from the United States and the United States takes 40 to 50 per cent of all Brazil's exports.

The United States consumes nearly one-half of all the coffee exported from Brazil, roughly around 1,000,000,000 pounds a year. Few people know that Brazil exports manganese ore to the United States exclusively. The main imports from the United States consist chiefly of machinery, textiles, gasoline and coal.

Am. Sugar Earns 93 Cents a Share

American Sugar Refining Co., including domestic and Cuban constituent companies, for 1935, reports a net income of $3,570,930, equivalent after preferred dividends to 93 cents per share on the common. This compares with $4,752,353, or $3.76 per share in 1934.

Earl D. Babst, chairman, in his annual report criticized government sugar control plans seeking to increase the income of growers of sugar beets and cane through advancing prices, granting benefit payments, and control of production by establishing quotas.

The only assistance attempted for the American cane sugar refiners, Mr. Babst declared, was a slight limitation of the amount of refined sugar coming from Cuba and the island dependencies, adding:

Continuation of heavy shipments of duty free refined sugar from insular possession, producers and from Cuba, which enjoys a preferential tariff, and the confusion of raw sugar markets, under what Mr. Babst characterized as government control, to a point where refining margin was inadequate to provide profit, were cited by the executive as the chief reasons for the relatively poor showing last year.

LEATHER

Higher PRICES ARE Seen

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Boston shoe and leather circles found the remarks of President Henry Mc-Adoo of United States Leather at the annual stockholders meeting of particular interest.

Aside from his comments on the company's earnings outlook Mr. McAdoo intimated that its policy for the current year included allowance for higher prices.

After recognizing the present lull experienced by the trade the U. S. Leather leader said a reversal might be expected in three or four weeks and told stockholders he felt rising commodity prices should be reflected in profits. After a suggestion by a stockholder as to the advisability of hedging against inventories Mr. McAdoo acknowledged he might be wise under certain conditions but at the present time did not look like the right move.

The current trade report for the Boston area compiled by Dun & Bradstreet contains some encouraging shoes and leather elements that fit in with the above very nicely. The sale of footwear at retail is reported to be increasing. But stocks in the hands of retailers and jobbers are believed sufficient to supply current demand. This situation would seem to account for Mr. McAdoo's expectation the trade would experience a reversal of the present lull in three or four weeks. On the raw stock end, we are informed by the trade survey, packer hides are more active at firm prices. Yet tanners report little more than orders for current needs. At the same time shoe jobbers are said to be particularly satisfied with collections. Trade fundamentals are healthy.

Notebook: Reserve a prominent place in trading notes for leather company stocks . . . For Especially U. S. Leather . . . On all the reliable signs say the trade expects the third and fourth quarters to be out-of-while . . . Another group we will want to devote a good deal of attention to sometime in the next month is the dairy section . . . Beatrice Creamery is our particular bright favorite . . . On a per share basis we are told this company has the largest volume of sales . . . Consequently it may be expected to have the largest percentage profit per share . . . However, we will go further and in either group until the position of the market may be determined more accurately.

During the first three sessions of the week we get out more than a reasonable market action down in great detail. If suggestions were followed positions have been trimmed in new in several directions. We now wait to see just what terrors a reaction holds, if any. Also, if a written prices are decidedly on the offside and an answer should be possible to the question. News is scarce, if the war is omitted, and technical market action assumes great importance, especially as trade trends are more favorable than otherwise.

Briefs: Electric Bond & Share and Electric Power & Light have been spoken of here before . . . And without a large public following may interfere with immediate price prospects we still think the two stocks are going to do much better before many months have passed . . . Van Raalte has some boosters who think that after a reaction the old top will be quickly exceeded . . . Those who followed our advice on Minneapolis Moline and International Harvester will be mostly situated in the group but should allow for some real before resumption of the upswing.

LUCKY FRIDAY "13th" for THRIFTY BUYERS of USED CARS

FINANCIAL

Money to Loan

On the air—"MAKERS OF HISTORY"—EVERY SUNDAY—WBZ-WBZA 4:15

2 JOBS for every husband

That down-town job is important—but still more important is your "other business", the business of living and enjoying a home!

That partnership you can more surely operate at a profit, if you follow the Co-operative Bank loan plan of systematic saving—financing (or re-financing) your mortgage with small monthly payments, like rent, which can cover everything—interest, principal, insurance and taxes.

★ Co-operative Bank pays profits to nobody but its shareholders. You become one of these shareholders with the first dollar you pay. Quicker saving—easier home-buying! CALL or WRITE for new booklet—"FREE and CLEAR."

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

THURSDAY, MARCH 12, 1936

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

A Halt on Government By Raiding Parties

THE Supreme Court of the District of Columbia has laid a restraining hand upon Senator Hugo Black and his marauding committee.

For some months it appears that this committee, which has yet to make the discovery that THE CITIZEN has ANY RIGHTS, has been ransacking the files of the telegraph companies and assembling private messages to see whether BY CHANCE they contain any matter which the committee can use for its political fishing excursions or for personal publicity.

SUCH A THING IS A RANK ABUSE OF POWER AND IN FLAGRANT VIOLATION OF THE CITIZEN'S IMMUNITY, GUARANTEED BY THE CONSTITUTION, FROM "UNREASONABLE SEARCHES AND SEIZURES."

Perhaps we cannot do better than recall some observations upon it by Cooley, the great authority on constitutional law.

The meaning of this provision is that every man may defend his privacy not against private individuals merely, but AGAINST OFFICERS OF THE LAW AND THE STATE ITSELF.

The Amendment, which is a part of our Bill of Rights, declares that "the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated; and no warrant shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons or things to be seized."

THE latter clause sufficiently indicates the circumstances under which a reasonable search or seizure may be made.

FIRST, a warrant must issue; and this implies—

(1)—A law which shall point out the circumstances and conditions under which the warrant may be granted;

(2)—A court or magistrate empowered by the law to grant it;

(3)—An officer to whom it may be issued for service.

SECOND, a showing of probable cause must be made, by which is meant the production of satisfactory evidence to the court or magistrate, showing that a case exists in which the issue of a warrant would be justified by the law, and pointing out the place to be searched and the persons or things to be seized, if they shall be found there.

THIRD, a particular description in the warrant of the place, person or thing, sufficient to guide the officer in executing it.

AND THE SUPREME COURT HAS HELD THAT NOTHING LESS THAN THIS CAN BE SUFFICIENT!

We're Out of the League!

The nations which ratified that treaty are bound under its terms to PUNISH Germany for violating it.

The United States did NOT ratify that treaty.

It did NOT become a member of the League of Nations. It is under NO obligation, moral or legal, to intervene in any way in the affairs of Europe.

The Hearst newspapers led the fight to PREVENT the United States from signing the treaty and becoming a member of the League of Nations.

The Hearst newspapers warned that if America did become a member of the League of Nations it would inevitably have to fight to settle the quarrels of Europe.

Time has proved the stand was RIGHT. Had America signed that treaty, bugles might be blowing throughout America today. American youth might soon be cannon fodder in another "war to end war."

No bugles are sounding. No soldiers are marching. No mothers are weeping. NOT IN AMERICA.

Is there any AMERICAN who is not ready to shout "Hallelujah" for that?

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, March 12—Jimmy Durante could win in a walk, the Rialto's Worst Dressed Man Sweepstakes. For a time Hollywood almost caught him in its sartorial stride. He was reported as being seen now and then in a collegiate blazer and little boy pants. Even leading a police dog.

But back in New York once more he returns to the nabbiments of his piano pounding days in the Coney Island joints. He wanders the theatrical district in a loose-fitting hand-me-down, his collar half open and looped with a carelessly tied four-in-hand.

This wisp of straggly forelock is combed each morning by a flick of the hand. Jimmy could hop into the driver's seat of a passing truck without change of costume. But the comedian is entirely uptown in gastronomic tastes. He lunches and dines at the more expensive cafes.

And like the fabled bowman, he relaxes amid clamor of the type of noisier cabarets, where he attracted his first following. Much of Durante's illiteracy is entirely professional. He is said to be a good talker and a fair student of world affairs.

Two of the favorite beaux of the top drawer set are Milton Holden and William Rhinelander Stewart. Smartly dressed, handsome elegants who fit the society journals' composite of the perfectly mannered worldlings, at home at Palm Beach, the Long Island Hamptons or on a private yacht. They were spawned by the same sort of social units of various eras that produced E. Berry Wall and Frank Crowninshield. Social units, indeed, that may vanish with the present era.

Incidentally, many wonder if the passing of Mrs. E. Berry Wall on the Riviera will not end the 30-year exile of her husband. The fashion plate of his Gay '90 day, he fled New York because of its growing vulgarity. Nearly all expatriates who belonged to his circle have long since abandoned France.

He is the lone sentinel in a devastating havoc of American aristocracy abroad, a symbol of the tragic consequences so often befalling those who abandon their native land in pique. And sometimes return kneeling.

Spats seem to be doing an overthe-river ta ta along with that other famous accoutrement, the walking stick. There are not enough canes on the avenue these days to kindle a grate fire. Even the visiting British author is caneless.

Spats have been supplanted by clothtop shoes. Such dandies as Jean Patou in Paris and William Gaxton over here have been sporting them. Kyrle Bellew, a handsome dog in his day, was the first person I ever saw in spats, a snowy pair which he affected at a Billie Burke opening night at the Empire.

They so dazzled Acton Davies, the critic, that he wrote his review about them instead of the show.

The most imitated actress off stage, especially among boarding school girls, was an actress whose vogue seemed short or they can't find the proper play for her.

Another reason for her non-appearance may be that she is well fixed and does not need the money. I speak of Hope Williams. Her draggy, high tonsiled talk, coupled with a slouchy leves swagger were taken up by thousands of girls who frequented fashionable watering places as well as the basement counter maids and five and ten ladies.

Miss Williams' slowly intoned "Goo-oo-o-d bye-aye!" and shiftless mosey across stage appealed to feminine youth more than anything since the days Geraldine Farrar inspired the "garry-flapper."

Bagatelles: Georga Jessel was the Palm Beach crowd's favorite winter clown . . . Leo Marsh, to help while away the tedium of slow convalescence, wrote a play . . . Martha Wilchinski, once needing $25 in a hurry, wrote and sold a poem to a magazine in 30 minutes . . . Nick Longworth was one of America's most accomplished violinists . . . But only his close friends heard him play . . . Billy DeBeck has a trunkful of loud ties he's scared to wear . . . Harry Evans is the only socialite who can call all the square dances.

She had been parked all evening with an elderly whitehead of the barrel cuff era. And as she passed a group of cronies at a night club table departing she whispered; "Lamp my Townsend plan prospect. I'm not an idiotic!"

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

Little Polly Parrot has come to live with me. Give you three tries or a million, and you'd never guess why!

Gay little Poll with her garnet crest cocked over a wicked amber eye, the sassy flounce of her flibbertigibbety tail, and the heart - wrenching drag of her broken wing—what a scrap of a scamp to have done such a job on me!

But why should I want to buy a bird with a broken wing? I told you, you'd never guess. And I'd have asked the same myself a week ago.

Pet shops—I dodge 'em usually. Makes me sickish to see living things caged and chained, with the proud, bright wildness of their eyes filming over. Yes, mostly I pass places like that on high. But that day, there sat Polly in a little huddle. And something held me fast.

HAUNTED BY MEMORIES

Perhaps it was because I'd gone into a pretty bad huddle myself. Oh, yes—I'd bluffed. Pretended to be getting on swell—but what's the use of trying to kid yourself? There was the same old hurt, going on and on. When I could work fast enough, hard enough, it wasn't so bad. But there were some times I simply couldn't lick.

That bad bit at twilight—maybe you know it, though God knows I hope you don't!—when I'd catch myself listening for his step again. And that even worse emptiness each morning—waking to find, all over, that it wasn't just a bad dream.

Day after day, year after year, with times like that bring in wait for you like deadfalls . . . ready to crush the heart out of you. As something had, once upon a time, crushed poor little Poll.

"Perhaps that was why she stopped me—the feel of that bond between us—she with her broken wing, I with mine. But she was making a better job of bearing it than I ever had! There she sat, with her wise little head tilted to one side and a cheery little chuckle bubbling in her throat.

SANG A LULLABYE

What on earth—you could see her asking herself—ailed this great, grim lump of a human on the other side of the pane? Locks and bars, chains and bolts—surely, if these hadn't taken the bounce and bubble out of her, who'd been born jungle free, I should be able to stand whatever had fallen on me. But plainly I wasn't—and Poll was out to know why.

Sa-w-w-wish . . . flutter . . . flip . . . away she whirled, fandancing over her perch . . . darting me to follow with every impudent twirl. Nothing doing? What a woman! Then maybe I'd fall for her whistle? Swelling full as a flower went her soft green throat, and out it came—of all things, "When Irish eyes are smiling." Where on earth had the little minx ever learned that? Yet still I refused to smile!

Disgusting! Back she bounced and plainly glared. Scratched an outraged ear. Rolled a jeering eye. Then—I'm proud to state—opened wide her bill and gave me the cussin' of my life. Screeched like a little emerald shrew! Squawked . . . squalled . . . flounced until each furious fluff of feather stood on end!

And then—oh, the darling!—from what depth of her loving little heart did the knowledge come? From what dim understanding of her own cruel hurt did she learn how to heal mine?

Suddenly she was pressing toward me, as near as she could come . . .

POLLY'S SALUTE

Then slowly, while she clutched her perch with a valiant little claw, down she dipped and out—quivering inch by inch—Polly spread her broken wing. And gave me her salute!

And then— for a swift, lovely moment there were no bars between her understanding and mine. Nor was there a woman with a broken heart looking at a bird with a broken wing. But only a gallant little soul giving her wisdom to one who needed it sorely—a deep truth learned through pain.

That there is no real bond to hold you except your heart's own fear—

No grief that can ever lick you IF YOU'VE GOT WHAT IT TAKES TO GRIN!

So Polly came home to live with me, riding on my shoulder. And singing, between curses, a lilt of Irish eyes! And if that isn't reason enough for taking a lady in——— with you, says Polly!

"Dear Govt."

By Winston Norman

HOME OWNERS' LOAN
Wash, D. C.
Dear Gentlemen:

This here is just a friendly warning, you better not send no Govt Agents out to my Uncle's farm, because Uncle is waiteing with a shotgun to take a pop at the 1st one he sees.

I was out to Uncle's farm last Sunday, and he was so mad he couldn't hardly tell me what was wrong. But pretty soon he calmed down & says, "I am setting here with my shot-gun, because the New Deal loaned me $2000 in 1934."

"But for goodness sake, Uncle," I says to him, "borrowing easy money off of the Govt isn't nothing to get mad about."

"That ain't the trouble," says Uncle, "the money was alright, and I built me a nice Home Loan House, but the Govt has wrote me & says they will forclose if I don't begin to pay up."

That looked like a mistake, because the HOLC saved a lot of home-owners from them Greedy Bankers, and now the Govt was turning around & threwing my Uncle out in the cold, just like a Banker would of done.

Uncle began to to waive his shot-gun, he says, "What is the good of a Govt Loan if you got to pay it back? The New Deal is makeing a Sucker out of me just like Wall St. used to do. They learn me to borrow because this here is a Land of Plenty, but all of a sudden the Plenty runs out & they send me in a bill!"

You can see where my Uncle has had his faith shook in the New Deal. And there is millions of Home borrowers in the same boat as him. They are setting on their front stoop & wondering how long it will be there. They didn't try to pay back their Home Owners Loan, because the New Deal wanted to be a big brother to them, and a man don't never pay back a brother.

So please write my Uncle & tell him this foreclosing business is just a little joak. The Govt isn't never going to pay off none of ther debts, so why should my Uncle pay off his?

Yours truly,

W. NORMAN.

Our Mighty Niagara

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

The news reel whose voice I have the privilege of being brings to us twice each week informative, amusing and exciting episodes of life around the earth—life in motion, life in action, life as it is lived.

Movement is the very essence of interest in news reel pictures. And yet, paradoxically enough, one of the most interesting subjects which the Metrotone News offered in recent months was a picture of motionless Niagara, locked and frozen in silent immobility.

All that tremendous surge and rush of water, sweeping down the short river and plunging over the precipitous cliffs into the deep gorge, had been arrested by the paralyzing grip of the severest winter in many years.

Curious, indeed, how arresting that picture was of lifeless, motionless Niagara—the stupendous cascade in completely stopped motion. Leap-year brides had a view of the falls that very few people have ever had.

The story of the Niagara begins 30,000 years ago, in the Ice Age, and at the time of the formation of the Great Lakes. The vast basin of Lake Superior holds almost half of the fresh water of the world. Its overflow joins with that of Lake Michigan and Lake Huron to pour into Lake Erie.

ROARING WATERS

Seeking an outlet to the sea, these waters break out of the Erie at the rate of 280,000 cubic feet a second, to form the Niagara River, which, in turn, tumbles on for 31 miles to empty into Lake Ontario.

In that dim, distant and icy past, the great cliffs which form the Niagara Falls of today were seven miles downstream toward Lake Ontario. Inch by inch, foot by foot, the river has bitten away the hard limestone and sandstone. But it still has 16 miles to go, a task of at least 20,000 years.

Old Thundering Water has a difficult job cutting out its bed because its course is over a plateau of limestone. But little by little and bit by bit the limestone is undermined as the waters eat into the softer stone beneath.

As this under-rock is undercut, the limestone drops of its own weight. However, it is always a clean break and leaves a vertical wall from which the water drops a sheer 166 feet.

For all of the rocksliden and the fear that time may yet wreck the great cascade, Niagara Falls remains the most magnificent spectacle of our hemisphere. Perhaps it is not so thrilling to this generation and not quite the wonder that it was to our parents and grandparents. In those good old days a trip to Niagara Falls went hand in glove with the rice, the wedding ring and the words "I do."

SUPREME SENSATION

Niagara had its great vogue from the era of the crinoline and bustle down to that of the slit skirt. Honeymooners by the hundred of thousands, foreign visitors in droves, went to stare and admire. Blondin, Sam Patch and Captain Webb kept it constantly in the public mind. These reckless spirits dared the wrath of old Thundering Water.

As far back as 1829, Sam Patch began the stunting. Three times he jumped into the falls, and the third time he failed to come out. Matthew Webb the first person to swim the English Channel, tried to swim the rapids of Niagara but he lost his life. The famous Blondin, however, lived to tell the tale and to grow rich from his spectacular feats at Niagara.

He was a Frenchman and his real name was Jean Francois Gaveiet. He came to America in 1859 and announced that he would walk a tight rope above the great falls. They laughed at him, but they turned out by the thousands when the day came, and the young man kept his boast to the letter. Over the roaring torrent he walked a cable 1100 feet long. He repeated that perilous walk half a dozen times.

In the following year, for the edification of the Prince of Wales, later Edward VII, he paused in the middle of his trip to eat an omelet and drink a bottle of wine. He was the supreme sensation of his day—and even now, in this sophisticated age, Blondin would draw a "gate" of a hundred thousand fans at least.

Brazen Dictatorship

By James T. Williams, Jr.

After three years of personal government, which rules Washington today, has finally raised its head high enough for its ugly features to be seen as clearly by the naked eye as the sound of its rattle has for some time been audible to the discerning ear.

Within the month several things have happened at the national capital which have enabled millions of Americans to comprehend for the first time the sinister significance of earlier happenings since personal government supplanted the government of the Constitution.

First, the seizure and search by personal government of the private telegrams of organizations and citizens suspected of criticising or thwarting the attempt of personal government to entrench itself for another four years in complete control of both the executive and legislative branches of the Federal government.

SEIZED TELEGRAMS

Second, by divulging on the floor of the Senate by a member of that body of the subject of a purely personal letter which had been addressed to a former Senator of the United States, delivered by mistake into the hands of the Senator who not only read it, but made public reference on the floor of the Senate to its contents and threatened its author with the wrath of personal government.

As matters stand now, no American citizen, residing in Washington, can file a telegram to anybody anywhere on any subject without running the risk of having the telegram seized by the janissaries of personal government and put to any punitive use that personal government may order.

No American citizen, resident in the Federal city, can put in a long distance telephone call to anybody anywhere for the purpose of conversing on any subject, without running the risk of being suspected of hostility to personal government, and, on the basis of such suspicion have his right to privacy subjected to the tapping of his telephone that the "snoopers" of personal government may "listen in" on the conversation.

PERSONAL GOVERNMENT

Personal government was "rebuked" when all domestic airmail contracts were arbitrarily cancelled before their holders could receive the day in court to which they were entitled under the government of the Constitution.

Personal government rattled again when the Supreme Court of the United States, having declared the NRA unconstitutional, was subjected to the unjust criticism that its decision would thrust the American people back into the horse-and-buggy age.

Personal government was rattled in the ear of the Congress when it was notified that it must enact legislation in disregard of reasonable doubts regarding its constitutionality.

And now personal government is rattling up and down the telegraph and telephone wires that lead from Washington into the homes of American citizens North, East, South and West.

Now that its ugly head has been raised high enough in recent weeks for them to see it with the naked eye, they can comprehend, as never before, the difference between personal government and that "Government of Laws and not of Men" which is the American system of government—the government of the Constitution of the United States, of which the Supreme Court of the United States is "the keystone of the arch."

Chivalry Still in Bloom?

By Winifred Black

Hail to you, Judge Maddux of Fresno, California! I never saw you in my life, but you must be quite a man. And we're proud of you out here on the coast just for that decision you made in the case of a mother fighting for her child in your court.

One of the witnesses in the case was a miserable creature who went on the stand and swore that the mother had been his sweetheart and that he had helped her to make a fool of her husband. And what did you do, Judge Maddux, when this testimony came out?

You straightened your back, threw back your head and they saw the flash of your eyes as you said:

Maybe she was worthy and maybe she wasn't. But nine chances to ten she'll take better care of the child than any wellmeaning man could do, no matter how good and honest he was. After all, there's something in that tie of love.

Women who kiss and tell are bad enough in all conscience, but a man—why, he isn't a man at all.
